Signs Of Spring In The Country

N.E. Compact Commission Sets Supply Management Hearing

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

MONTPELIER, Vt. — The Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact Commission has announced a May 5 hearing to gather testimony on a proposal to establish a supply management program.

The hearing is to be held 9 a.m. at the Wayfarer Inn in Bedford, New Hampshire.

Though the notice of the hearing stated that pre-filed testimony was preferred, the deadline for submitting pre-filed testimony has passed. The hearing was announced April 12 by Compact officials, though notification was not widespread. The deadline for pre-filed testimony was April 26.

The hearing was brought to the attention of Lancaster Farming after the deadline passed.

However, those who wish to offer comments do not have to appear in person, but can submit sworn and notarized testimony, written comments and exhibits to: Northeast Dairy Compact Commission, 34 Barre Street, Suite 2, Montpelier, Vermont, 05602.

The deadline for submitting written comments is 5 p.m., May 19. Copies of testimony sent to the commission via fascimile also will be accepted by until 5 p.m., May 19, but the original — sworn and notarized — must follow soon afterward in regular mail.

The fact that the Compact Commission has called for a hearing on a proposed amendment to its over-order price regulation "to establish a supply management program" is not a reflection on an actual need for a supply management program within the six New England states Compact, according to Kenneth Becker, executive director of the Compact Commission.

According to Becker, regulations require the commission to consider such a proposal.

"The Compact itself has a clause that requires the Commission to take such action as necessary ... to ensure the over-order price does not create an incentive to generate additional supplies of milk," Becker said this week, citing Compact wording.

"So, it's required by law that the Commission pay attention to this whole matter of milk supplies."

But he did say the limited history of the Compact does show some need for the Commission to understand what is happening in the Compact region and what effect the Compact is having on dairy pricing in the Compact and surrounding region.

To fulfill its obligation to consider any factors which could encourage additional production of milk in the Compact, in the spring of 1998 the Commission held a series of meetings in the New England states, at which more than 500 farmers participated, Becker said.

There had been an increase in production, but farmer testimony at the time was that the cause was better weather than the previous winter, and cheaper feed compared to the previous year's very high

Reformatting Lancaster Farming, A Photo Essay

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) – Early last year Penn State University Libraries' preservation department discovered its heavily used backfile of the Lancaster Farming was in such poor physical condition that it was seriously endangered and at risk of being lost. Since Lancaster Farming is the most sought publication in the libraries' archives, reformatting to microfilm was the only viable solution to combat the destruction and save the newspaper.

National Grain Market

St. Joseph, MO
Wed Apr 28, 1999

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Grain and soybean bids showed some strength, today, due to continued wet weather in the Corn Belt areas, some export optimism for wheat, over-night corn sale to Korea, and higher soybean meal prices. Wheat 1 to 5 cents higher. Corn steady to 1 cent higher. Sorghum 1 cent lower. Soy- beans 1 to 5 cents higher. Wheat bids were slightly higher on expectations of wheat sales to Iran and other sanctioned countries. Indications that CCC bought 100,000 metric tons of Soft Red Winter Wheat for domestic use also offered support. Limiting gains was continued favorable growing conditions for winter wheat areas. Slight gains in corn bids were due to the overnight sale to Korea and continued planting delays in parts of the Corn Belt areas. Another two weeks of soggy conditions and soybeans may have to be substituted. Soybean bids were slightly higher in reaction to higher wheat and corn. Soybean meal showed some strength due to smaller than expected crush and meal supplies. Reported flooding in Argentina's soybean growing areas also supported the US market.

In the dairy business, income over feed cost is the name of the game Pro-Lix liquid feed supplements offer dairymen the means to maximize this value while getting the most from their cow's natural abilities

Pro-Lix liquid feed supplements are concentrated sources of just what ordinary feeds lack. protein, energy, vitamins, minerals -- everything animals need for economical milk production and growth

For replacement heifers, Pro-Lix means faster maturity and assurance that they'll get to the milking herd on time If you trust your heifers to forage alone, they might not make it (Bouvatec Is Available)

For lactating cows, the nitrogen content of Pro-Lix means plenty of protein available for milk production and growth

Finally, for dry cows, Pro-Lix not only helps maintain their health during the dry period it prepares them for the next lactation. The Ca·P ratio in Pro-Lix helps control milk fever, while the Vitamin E and selenium aids in clean-up after the birth of a calf

Best of all, Pro-Lix works with all types of pasture grass or forage, as a free-choice supplement, a top-dressing, or a ration mix

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

MAY 3-9, 1999

ROGATION SUNDAY, MAY 9.

YOU'LL NEVER RUE THE RHUBARB

Rhubarb (also called the pie plant) is best planted in the early spring before its growing season, either by purchasing new plants or roots or by separating old clumps into smaller divisions. Separate each by at least three feet and plant it a good two inches under the soil, then fertilize generously with farm manure, repeating the feeding each fall. A small crop may be taken the next year, but it's best to wait until the following year so that the plants have a chance to establish themselves. Pick by twisting the stalks; cutting the stalks can lead to rot that affects the roots. Always leave a few stalks growing to feed the roots.

Let all thy joys be as the month of May . . .

– Francis Quarles

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Resist the temptation to set out seedlings before the last average frost date for your region.

RHUBARB GRILLED CHICKEN

2 cups diced rhubarb
1 cup red wine or orange juice
2 cups sugar
1/2 cup Dijon-style mustard
4 pounds boneless chicken breasts
1 tablespoon olive oil

Combine first 4 ingredients in a saucepan and simmer until rhubarb is soft. Puree in a blender and set aside Skin and lightly pound the chicken breasts. Oil the grill and cook chicken until just done, about 5 minutes per side. Brush chicken with rhubarb glaze during the final minutes of cooking, and serve with remaining glaze.

Makes 8 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

Cold May brings many things.

Water in May is bread all year.

A windy May makes a fair year.

If May will be a gardener, he will not fill the granaries.

OPINION

Fairness, Sound Science Should Guide

Farm Bureau last week told a congressional panel that the only fair way to implement the Food Quality Protection Act (FQPA) is to evaluate pesticides using real-world data and to give researchers ample time to develop viable alternatives to crop protection tools that may be wiped out by the law.

At first heralded by farmers, legislation promising to modernize the nation's food safety laws has now become growers' worst nightmare thanks to the misguided enforcement by the Environmental Protection Agency, said American Farm Bureau Federation President Dean Kleckner.

"In 1996, Farm Bureau members nationwide were urging their members of Congress to pass FQPA," Kleckner told a House Agriculture subcommittee, "but they would have never done so knowing what they know now."

FQPA was intended to replace the outdated zero-tolerance standard for measuring pesticide residues on food with a new health-based standard reflecting modern science's ability to detect chemicals at extremely low levels — a move lauded by agriculture and environmentalists alike.

But since the law's passage, EPA has been harshly criticized for side-stepping Congress' original intent. Kleckner described EPA's handling of the implementation process as being riddled with bad science and a disregard for accepted rule-making practices.

One of Farm Bureau's greatest concerns is that EPA has continually rejected the use of real-world data in its efforts to re-evaluate the safety of commonly used farm chemicals. Instead, the agency has relied heavily upon default assumptions about exposure levels. For example, Kleckner said, EPA "assumes that farmers use pesticides at maximum rates, on all acres, and apply the maximum number of applications."

The end result, he explained, is that "those types of assumptions have very little resemblance to real-world exposure." In one such case, EPA's assessment of a pesticide used commonly on apples appeared to be a serious health threat when default assumptions were used, yet that same chemical was deemed safe when realistic data were incorporated into the evaluation.

Kleckner said this gap between worst-case and real-world data underscores the need for a stronger partnership between EPA and the Agriculture Department. He called on lawmakers to "clearly instruct EPA" to use its data call-in authority in order to obtain reliable information from farmers, registrants and others.

"With real-world data, we can replace these worst-case assumptions, but it takes time and cooperation from EPA and USDA," said Kleckner.

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Properly Plant Corn

One of the most important areas in corn production that the farmer has control over is planting. According to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent, planting may be divided into several important areas These include the date the crop is planted, the depth the seed is planted, the spacing between the rows and the spacing of the plants within the rows

A key factor to remember is that a plant's production potential is a function of photosynthesis Photosynthesis is done in the leaves of the plant Therefore, the management system should strive to have the maximum leaf surface available on the day with the most sunlight.

The day which has the potential for the most sunlight is June 20th, the longest day of the year. Therefore it is necessary to plant early, plant high populations and plant at the ideal depth for uniform and fast germination and making sure that seeds are spaced uniformly within the rows.

To Evaluate Starter Fertilizer

Corn growers are aware of two key factors associated with fertilizer these days. First, it is expensive Second, too much may be bad for the environment

According to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent, corn growers need to weigh the benefits of using a starter fertilizer when planting against the financial and possible negative impact Starter fertilizer is usually most beneficial in cold, wet soils Under these conditions nutrients are not always readily available to small plants This is especially true of immobile nutrients like phosphorous

Deciding when to or not to apply a starter fertilizer should be based on weather conditions and fertility level of the soil

Corn is most likely to show a response to starter fertilizer when planted into cool soils and will remain cool based on the weather forecast In addition, corn is most likely to show a response to starter fertilizer when soils are low in phosphorous

Soils with optimum to high levels of phosphorous are less likely to show a yield response Soils with an excessive level of phosphorous, even under cool growing conditions, are not very likely to show a response

Farmers who do use a starter fertilizer, may receive the maximum benefit when applying them at the minimum rate their equipment will allow unless the soils are deficient in phosphorous

To Lower SCC Counts

The National Mastitis Council (NMC) has proposed to lower the legal limit for somatic cell count (SCC) from 750,000 to 400,000 by January 1, 2003 The average United States SCC is around 360,000

However, 15 to 20 per cent of the United States herds could not meet the 400,000 SCC level today The NMC proposes adopting a rolling 12 week average SCC beginning January 1, 2000. The SCC will decrease over the next three years until it reaches 400,000 in 2003.

According to NMC, a healthy cow's SCC nearly always averages less than 200,000. A SCC of 400,000 means about 12 5 per cent of quarters in a herd are infected. At 750,000, you will see inflammation in about 25 per cent of herd quarters.

Increased SCC impacts a dairy farmer's profits Reduced milk production, treatment costs, discarded milk, premature culling and lost milk quality bonuses are some of the economic loses associated with high SCC.

If you herd SCC is over 400,000, you need to look for ways to reduce your SCC today. Contact you're your veterinarian or county extension agent for ways to reduce your SCC.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WHERE'S THE GLORY?
May 2, 1999

Background Scripture:
John 12:20-50
Devotional Reading:
Romans 5:1-11

When Jesus announced, "The hour has come for the Son of man to be glorified," (12:23). I'm sure the disciples assumed that he meant that the homage paid him by the crowds on Palm Sunday would be capped by some even greater exhibition of God's favor. Isn't that what one would expect if they were to be "glorified?"

But they must have been puzzled when he replied, "Truly, truly, I say to you, unless a grain of wheat falls into the earth and dies, it remains alone, but if it dies, it bears much fruit." What does being "glorified" have to do with a seed dying and bearing "much fruit?" The disciples must have felt euphoric about the great reception along the Palm Sunday road, but now Jesus is sounding doomed!

His next words are even more portentous: "He who loves his life loses it, and he who hates his life in this world will keep it for eternal life. If any one serves me, he must follow me; and where I am, there shall my servant be also." What is Jesus suggesting about the fate of those who follow him? Surely being in the vanguard of the Messiah is not meant to be a hazardous association! Who would join a Messiah who promised, not security, but danger?

DANGER AHEAD?

If they listened carefully to what Jesus said next, they would realize that even the Messiah himself would be endangered: "Now is my soul troubled. And what shall I say? 'Father, save me from this hour?' No, for this purpose I have come to this hour," (12:27).

Is Jesus saying that this dangerous situation which he is anticipating is the way things are supposed to go? Jesus has already said that his disciples "must follow me." That is scary because it is obvious that Jesus is headed in harm's way.

Ironically, their Master's next words are: "Father, glorify thy name." Something very strange follows: there was a great noise, everyone would agree to that. But what made that noise? "The crowd standing by heard it and said that it had thundered. Others said, 'An angel has spoken to him'." So some of them heard the answer to Jesus' prayer: "I have glorified it, and I will glorify it again."

Jesus explains to the disciples that "This voice has come for your sake, not for mine." In other words, the road to the Messiah's glorification ran through the valley of the shadow of death — as must theirs as well. Glorification seems entirely incompatible with danger and death. Where's the glory in death? Jesus has already explained that if something dies it can yet, like a seed buried in the earth, yield "much fruit." Something good can come from this dangerous path he is following: only through death that we can know eternal life.

THE COSMIC CROSS

But this is about more than just one person's death or even that of his followers. The whole universe will be affected. By his death Jesus will utterly defeat Satan, "the ruler of this world" and his death will reconcile all humanity: ". . . I, when I am lifted up from the earth, will draw all men to myself" (12:32). Read in this light, Jesus' message is not really one of doom and gloom, but of the glory of God in Christ. As horrible as the cross will be, it will form the bridge whereby God is able to unloose his love into the cosmos. "I have come as light into the world," says Jesus, "that whoever believes in me may not remain in darkness" (12:46).

It is interesting, then, that having taught his disciples that he and they must tread a dangerous path to glorification, ". . . many even of the authorities believed in him, but for fear of the Pharisees they did not confess it, lest they should be put out of the synagogue: for they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God" (12:42). They wanted to play it safe, but you can't play it safe and follow Jesus Christ. You can have one or the other, but not both.

Where's the glory in danger and death? Answer: just on the other side. Either way, playing it safe or taking up a cross, it is a gamble. Each of us has to decide on what we will bet our lives.

Keystone 21 Awards Grants To Food System Projects

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) – Keystone 21, a partnership between Cheyney University of Pennsylvania, Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences and former Commonwealth Educational System, and the Rodale Institute, has funded three projects designed to enhance understanding about the food system.

The projects were awarded Keystone Grants, which can total up to $30,000 per year to a maximum of $50,000 for two years. The projects are:

- "The Environmental Quality Initiative," a collaboration between Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences and College of Communications, the Chesapeake Bay Foundation, Rodale Institute, Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture, and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

The goal of this project is to promote practical, effective environmental stewardship practices on dairy farms while maintaining profitability for farming communities. Participating agencies and organizations will provide an economic incentive program for farmers who implement management practices that help to reduce or eliminate agricultural pollution.

Through a special label on dairy product packages indicating that a portion of the purchase price will be deposited into a stewardship fund, the Environmental Quality Initiative will link environmentally minded consumers with dairy farmers who share their concerns. The fund will provide farmers with premiums for using environmentally sound practices and funding to help make management changes that enhance natural resources.

- "Mifflin County Youth Gardening Project: We've Got a Good Thing Growing," a continuation of an established collaboration between Penn State Cooperative Extension, Mifflin County Probation and Parole, and the Juniata-Mifflin Vocational Technical School.

This program allows youth probation and parole clients to satisfy community service requirements through 4-H gardening and plant science activities. Participants work with youth 4-H members and adult volunteers to design, maintain and harvest a garden.

The food raised in the project is donated to shelters and other nonprofit organizations with a demand for fresh produce. Flowers and decorative plants raised are donated for beautification projects at area nursing homes. By working with others to benefit those in need, participating at risk youth gain a sense of pride, as well as problem-solving, leadership and interpersonal skills.

- "Celebrating 250 Years of Agricultural Growth," a collaboration among the Agricultural and Industrial Museum of York County, Penn State York, Penn State Cooperative Extension, Bradley Lifting, Hoke's Mill, Farm and Natural Land Trust, D.F. Stauffer Biscuit Company and the Eastern York, York City and Northern York County school districts.

Designed to develop interdisciplinary food systems-oriented curricula and career awareness programs for students in York County, the program will focus on changes that have occurred over time to York County's agricultural heritage and its food-systems-related business concerns.

Students will attend a series of age-appropriate, learner-centered experiences at the Agricultural and Industrial Museum's 1840's-era grist mill, in classrooms and elsewhere around the community. Collaborators hope to raise awareness of food system issues, educational needs and career opportunities among urban and rural youth across the county, and to demonstrate the importance of the food system in the county's social, cultural and economic development.

Keystone 21 is seeking proposals for the next round of Keystone Grants. The application deadline is Feb. 15.

For more information, contact Elsie Gurgevich, Keystone 21 project coordinator, at (814) 865-0114 or send e-mail to PAFSPE @ pus.edu. World Wide Web users can learn more from the project's Internet site at http://www.cas.psu.edu/docs/CASPROF / keystone 21 / keystone21hm.html

New Healthy Pleasures Drink From DFA Set to Tickle Consumer Taste Buds

Healthy Pleasures, a new low-fat, dairy-based nutritional drink from Dairy Farmers of America (DFA), is getting rave reviews in consumer taste tests against leaders in one of the country's fastest growing food markets — the diet and nutritional drink category.

Healthy Pleasures is a shakelike drink fortified with a nutritionally balanced complement of vitamins and minerals produced by the Formulated Dairy Food Products division of DFA.

"In taste tests against other weight-control and nutritional drinks, consumers show a significant taste preference for Healthy Pleasures," says Dan Williams, vice president of marketing and sales for DFA. "In fact, its taste was actually preferred by dieting women over Ultra Slim Fast in a national taste test."

Including better taste, Healthy Pleasures has several key product innovations that set it apart from the competition:

- Healthy Pleasures is manufactured by a process that allows the product to be stored and transported without refrigeration for up to 12 months.
- Healthy Pleasures is the first nutritional beverage to be introduced in glass bottles with a full wraparound shrink label that are designed to be more consumer-friendly. In fact, the Healthy Pleasures package design won the beverage category Mobius Advertising Award in February 1999.

"We think the combination of excellent nutritional value, taste and innovative packaging will attract consumers to Healthy Pleasures as a convenient, healthy and enjoyable drink they can use anytime as a meal or snack substitute," Williams explains.

Sam McCroskey, chief operating officer at DFA Formulated Dairy Food Products, agrees. "Healthy Pleasures is the result of extensive product development, stringent taste testing and our experience with dairy products," McCroskey adds. "DFA has been a co-packer for leading nutritional drink companies for more than 50 years. During that time, we have established product development and manufacturing expertise that makes DFA a national leader in this category of products."

Dairy Farmers of America is a growing dairy marketing cooperative that markets milk for more than 22,000 dairy producer/members in 43 states. DFA supplies milk to bottling and manufacturing plants that produce a complete line of dairy products and food components for consumers in the United States and around the world.

CATTLE: Compared to last week's closing prices; slaughter steer trading turned very active at midweek and closed 1.50 to mostly 2.00 higher, after opening on the weak side Monday. The market finally flexed enough muscle to break out of the narrow trading range that has caged prices for months. Buyers were aggressive for all classes of slaughter steers, after boxed beef cut-out values broke 110.00 for both light and heavy Choice carcasses. Midwest fat cattle sold 1.00 higher this week at 66.00 live and 104.00 in the beef. Local Holstein steers sold 1.00-1.50 higher with good demand. There were not enough slaughter heifers on offer late in the week to fully test the market. Slaughter cow prices closed .50-1.00 higher this week on a light, but attractive offering. Slaughter bulls ended firm to 1.00 higher. Supply included 54 percent slaughter steers, 6 percent slaughter heifers, 27 percent slaughter cows, 6 percent slaughter bulls, with the balance made up of feeder cattle.

SLAUGHTER STEERS: High Choice and Prime 2-4 1140-1440 lbs 63.75-69.25, late in the week 65.50-69.25. # DFA Reviews 1998 Achievements, Activities

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — In a message outlining accomplishments of 1998, Dairy Farmers of America (DFA) President and Chief Executive Officer Gary Hanman told an audience of 1,700 members and guests that DFA members can be proud of what they have accomplished by working together in 1998.

Noting that 1998 was a year of record milk prices and a period of restructuring and change for the cooperative, Hanman said the year was challenging, but rewarding for the cooperative and its members.

He noted that the year opened with the Basic Formula Price (BFP) at $13.25 per hundredweight (cwt.) and ended at a record high BFP of $17.34 per cwt. The average BFP for 1998 was $14.20 per cwt.

In his report to members Hanman recounted accomplishments.

Achieved targeted earnings. "We set a goal of earning $70 million on total sales of $7 billion in 1998," said Hanman. "DFA completed the year with sales of $7.3 billion and a net margin of $70 million. DFA's joint ventures performed very well, returning $41 million to the bottom line. Manufacturing operations also had a good year, posting better than anticipated results."

Consolidated and restructured manufacturing operations. According to Hanman, one of the first tasks undertaken by management after the consolidation was a thorough analysis of DFA's total milk supply and manufacturing operations.

"We concluded that there was not enough milk to operate all consolidated facilities efficiently and economically," he said. "We had to make some difficult decisions, but based on that analysis, we closed 12 plants. Most of the costs associated with closing and selling those plants were expensed to 1998. DFA continues to operate 33 manufacturing plants, several of which were identified for growth and expansion."

Merged and restructured the work force. Another area that received considerable attention during the past year, according to Hanman, was internal operations.

"We restructured to reduce staff positions by nearly 25 percent," he said. These reductions, as well as other restructuring efficiencies within DFA, it is estimated will save about $60 million per year. In addition to reducing the number of employee positions, four corporate offices were closed and the corporate headquarters was located in leased space in Kansas City, Missouri.

Created a business alliance with Leprino Foods. Finalized in October, an agreement with Leprino Foods allows dairy farmers to join hands with one of the nation's largest pizza cheese suppliers. Included in this business venture was the sale to Leprino Foods of five DFA plants that make Mozzarella cheese for the fast food industry (Juda, Wisconsin, Hartington, Ravenna, Dodge and Norfolk, Nebraska). "A key part of the agreement," says Hanman, "is a contract for DFA to supply milk to Leprino Foods."

Continued to expand DFA joint venture bottling operations. An important element in DFA's market strategy has been the acquisition of joint venture partners in the bottling business. In 1998, DFA added new partners to its list of bottling joint ventures.

"In December, we completed our joint venture negotiations with Suiza Foods Corporation," explained Hanman. "This new venture significantly expands DFA's participation in the Northeastern fluid milk market. In addition, DFA added two other joint ventures — Washington-based Wilcox Dairy Farms and Melody Farms of Michigan. As these ventures expand in their markets, we anticipate new opportunities for DFA members," said Hanman.

Completed merger with Cal Gold. In December 1998, DFA completed its first merger since the consolidation of four cooperatives that created the new organization. "The merger with California Gold Cooperative Creamery added 330 members, producing 2.5 billion pounds of milk annually," explained Hanman. In addition, the merger nearly doubled DFA's milk volume in California and Cal Gold's manufacturing plants strengthen DFA's manufacturing capacity on the West Coast.

Developed a marketing strategy for Borden Cheese. "The nationally recognized and highly respected Borden brand allows DFA to broaden its retail cheese business," said Hanman. "In 1998, DFA focused on strengthening current markets and initiated a branded marketing strategy. These new initiatives will expand product lines and market penetration for Borden cheese."

Successfully pursued political initiatives. According to Hanman, DFA played an active role in securing approval of legislation enabling extension of the Northeast Dairy Compact and Federal Milk Market Order reform. In addition, DFA actively pushed for the $200 million dairy market loss payment, as well as income averaging and additional allowances for health insurance tax deductions for all farmers. "DFA's success in these issues was due in large part, to our ability to speak with a unified voice," he said.

Concluding his remarks, Hanman said DFA had accomplished most of the goals it set out at the beginning of the year.

"By forming DFA, dairy farmers have an organization of the size, scale and level of performance necessary to compete and win in a market increasingly dominated by large scale competitors and customers," he said.

"At the end of the first year of operation DFA has a strong base of membership supported by a workforce of dedicated employees. Furthermore, DFA has the resources to support its customers with a commitment to service and quality backed by years of experience in milk procurement and dairy product manufacturing. All this combines to provide opportunities for dairy farmers to earn a larger share of the consumer dollar. As DFA continues its evolution," he added.

"Our goal will continue to be to build an organization that will help our 22,000 members in 45 states thrive in a challenging and constantly changing business environment."

QUESTION: Is there a place to use molasses in our TMR (totally mixed ration)?

ANSWER: Molasses seems to have been one of the old-time feedstuffs that got lost in the attempt to push cows to higher levels of production.

Feeding styles of yesterday — where grains were fed to supplement forages, but not mixed with them — used molasses as a dust control measure.

Palatability was increased in grains by adding approximately 5 percent of the grain weight in molasses.

Molasses consumption with this scheme was usually limited to 1.5-pounds per cow per day, or roughly 3 percent of the diet to the cows giving the most milk, and eating the most grain.

This limitation was due largely to increased handling problems when we put more in the grain mix.

Dairies today that have gone to TMR-type feeding, should probably rekindle thoughts about using molasses. The reasons behind this are the same as when we used molasses in our grains.

Certainly, dust in not a problem in most TMRs fed in Pennsylvania. What about feeding dry hay and grain as the sole ingredients in our TMR?

This is quite common in places like Colorado and Arizona. We could use molasses under these conditions to increase palatability while decreasing dust.

The most common reason to use molasses that I have come across in Pennsylvania in separation.

It is said that many different diets are present on the farm. One is the diet that your nutritionist formulates. Molasses will not do much good for his computer.

The second diet is one that is mixed. Molasses can help here.

The third diet is the one that you present to your cows. Molasses will certainly help here, and your cows may thank you for it.

The fourth, and only diet that matters, is the one that the cow consumes. Molasses helps make this the same diet as the three previously mentioned, and often cows repay us with more consistent and profitable production.

When we examine production parameters and component tests throughout the cows in the herd, we sometimes see vast differences from one cow to another.

We often contribute this to differences between individuals. it is more likely to be the difference in the treatment of individuals.

Dairy management and feeding practices are geared to uniformity in the output of individuals in the herd. Even genetics are geared toward cows that have less difference in capabilities.

In addition to these influences, the dairy manager uses culling as a toll that leads to more uniformity as well as greater performance.

Why do we see large ranges in MUN values across a group of cows that are supposedly eating the same diet?

Have you ever considered the separation effect?

Back to the molasses question. Molasses is energy feed and compares with ear corn as an energy source. This is a secondary benefit.

Molasses can be utilized in TMRs at a rate near 10 percent of the diet, with no ill effects. I have personal experience with up to 6 pounds per cow per day, or 11 percent of the diet.

The best surprise came when we saw the real benefit of molasses.

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — From the turnout and events at the ninth annual Pennsylvania Beef Exposition here recently, it appears that the state's beef industry is alive and well.

The Expo, sponsored by the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association (PCA), the Pennsylvania Beef Council and Penn State, includes the annual PCA banquet and meeting, the Performance Test Bull Sale, and the junior steer and heifer show.

At the 25th Cattlemen's Banquet at Celebration Hall, the PCA presented awards to its members and elected new directors. Also, Tammy Weaver of the Pennsylvania Beef Council presented the 1999 Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Queen and announced scholarship award winners.

Seedstock Producer of the Year went to Ken Foust of Adams County. In addition to a purebred Simmental herd in Adams County started in 1986, he and his family operate the 2,400-acre Beefmaster Ranch in New Mexico. Foust has consigned the top indexing Simmental bull at the Pennsylvania Bull Test Sale for several years. He recently donated part of his land to the National Park Service to preserve the Gettysburg battlefields.

Jeff and Don Byerly of Union County were the Commercial Cattlemen of the Year The Byerly brothers and their family run a 50-head cow-calf operation on a rotational grazing system as well as two retail outlets from which they market both their own and other producers' beef. They share carcass data information, which they collect for making selections, with state and national breed associations and other producers. Several of their bulls qualified for the National Chianina Sire Summary. They are supportive of 4-H and FFA programs and are active in several industry organizations.

Winning Cattle Feeder of the Year honors were Wayne and Jean Hoffman of York county. In partnership with their son Joshua, the Hoffmans raise 800-900 beef heifers from 400-450 pounds to market weight (about, 1050 pounds) and 1,300 acres of corn and soybeans. Wayne Hoffman has served on his local school board and been a township supervisor, as well as having been chairman of the board of the Pennsylvania Beef Council.

For his conservation efforts Charlie Sherman of KC Acres in Adams County received the Environmental Stewardship Award. On his farm Sherman installed 3,500 feet of tile, two waterways, 300 feet of diversion ditches, and stream bank fencing.

Dr. Lowell Wilson, who retired last fall from his position of beef extension specialist and animal science professor at Penn State, won the Industry Service Award. During his 38-year career, he worked hard to improve the beef industry through educational and promotional activities. He played a key role in establishing the Penn State University Haller Livestock/Forage Farm, the Pennsylvania Beef Expo, Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association, the Pennsylvania Beef Council, and the Pennsylvanians for the Responsible Use of Animals organization. He is recognized nationally and internationally as a beef industry leader.

A Special Appreciation Award went to Joan Potter for her work as managing secretary of PCA for the last six years. As a liaison between PCA and National Cattlemen's Beef Association, she helped increase the PCA membership base and stature in the agricultural community.

The Pennsylvania Simmental Association also presented the following awards at the PCA Banquet: Breeder of the Year – Bob McQuiston, Stoneboro; Senior Member of the Year – Wayne Stough, York County 4-H leader; Junior Member of the Year – Valerie Blauch, Jonestown; and Young Family of the Year – Tammy and Troy Gelsinger, Berks County.

For the first time the Pennsylvania Beef Council pre-

She coordinates beef promotion displays and disseminates recipes and promotional materials at both county and state levels, including her local butcher shop and Giant Eagle stores.

With generous support and cooperation from the Lancaster Farming office, in May 1998 the University Libraries' preservation department began the process to convert the paper backfile (1955-1980) of the Lancaster Farming to microfilm. The huge task is now nearly completed.

The paper backfile of Lancaster Farming, like millions of other newspapers, printed books, county records, archival

In addition to the visual inspection of each reel, a technical inspection is conducted. A light-board, an eye loupe, a densitometer, and a microscope are standard tools used to inspect film. Each generation of each reel of film is inspected for minimum and maximum density, poor contrast, over- or underexposed images, and for physical defects such as scratches, finger prints, or water spots.

Once the physical inspection is completed, the next phase of the preparation is editorial prepping. This involves determining the contents of each reel to ensure that volume/page breaks occur at a logical chronological or bibliographical break. This process is known as reel programming. A total page count is taken of each volume to determine the number of volumes to appear on one reel. Generally, 600 to 800 pages fit on one 100 foot reel of 35mm film.

Once the volumes have been collated, reel-programmed, and filming targets prepared, the volumes are packed and shipped to the filming vendor for microfilming. National standards and recommended practices exist to ensure the quality and permanence of microfilm. As part of the preservation filming standard, three generations of film must be produced — an archival (camera) master negative, a print master negative (used to produce additional copies when needed), and the service copy (a positive image film for patron use).

This three-generation system is required for compliance with national standards and with the recommended guidelines for microfilm copies of public records with permanent value.

Beef Expo Honors Producers

Scholarship of $500, and Jamison Walker of Crawford County, a junior at Penn State with a 4.0 grade point average, received a $1,000 Ivamec Generation of Excellence Scholarship from Merck Animal Health Company.

In PCA business, five new PCA directors elected at the banquet were Rob Barley, Lancaster County; Dustin Heeter, Indiana County; Dennis Heisey, Lancaster County; Terry Schearer, York County; and Robert Suhosky, Wayne County. Bill Tindal, editor of the Keystone Cattlemen magazine, said he will try to improve the timeliness of the magazine so people will use it as a forum for sales advertising.

PCA President Bill McCoy said the association is making the most of check-off dollars, and he encouraged beef producers to "be informed and get involved" in beef organizations to keep abreast of issues and have one voice.

Landscape Tree Appraisal Workshop

WEST PITTSTON (Luzerne Co.) — Almost everyone knows that trees and other landscape plants are valuable. However, many people don't realize that trees and other landscape plants are worth money.

When plants are damaged or destroyed, appraisals are often needed for insurance claims, tax deductions, or court cases. Tree and plant appraisal are nothing new. A booklet titled Shade Tree Evaluation dates back to 1957.

In 1975, the Council of Tree and Landscape Appraisers (CTLA), a committee that represents many Green Industry organizations such as AAN, ALCA, ASCA, ISA, and NAA, developed the Guide for Establishing the Value of Trees and other Plants. In 1992 the eighth edition was published with many changes to the appraisal process, including local tree species ratings and tree replacement costs.

On May 20, Penn State Cooperative Extension has scheduled a workshop on Tree Evaluation and Appraisal at the Technology Center at the Penn State Wilkes-Barre Campus in Lehman, Pennsylvania. The workshop runs from 1 p.m.-5 p.m. and registration is $15.

Those in the Landscape or Tree Care Business — ISA certified arborists or Shade Tree Commission members interested in learning how the current CTLA appraisal method is accomplished should attend this workshop.

Crawford County DHIA Contracts With Lancaster DHIA Lab Service

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — The Crawford County DHIA Board recently voted to contract laboratory service and field training with Lancaster DHIA.

Crawford is an independent DHIA organization providing service to dairymen in Crawford and surrounding counties.

Under the new contract, Lancaster DHIA laboratory will test Crawford County DHIA samples for fat, protein, somatic cell levels, solids not fat, and milk urea nitrogen, as well as, upload data to the Raleigh Processing Center.

Lancaster DHIA will also provide certification and training support for Crawford County technicians.

Elaine Duncan, manager for Crawford County, said she believes the new service will further enhance benefits for Crawfords County dairymen, including access to MUN reports.

There is a mutual benefit in sharing the same training programs, as both organizations use DRMS Raleigh for processing.

Nutrient Requirements Of Dairy Cattle: An Update On National Research Council Recommendations

PENNSTATE College of Agricultural Sciences

From the Department of Dairy and Animal Science

This regular column from Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science features the research findings, student opportunities, and reports on other important topics generated in the Department. The back issues of the column are archived on Lancaster Farming's Internet www.lancasterfarming.com home page. Look for them.

Gabriella Varga
Professor of Animal Science

Many of you may wonder how we know what to feed dairy cattle and how nutrient requirements are established for the different phases of an animal's life. A government committee, sponsored by the National Research Council (NRC), was charged with revising and updating the 1989 sixth edition of "Nutrient Requirements of Dairy Cattle."

The NRC is a private, nonprofit society, chartered by Congress. The NRC's role is to associate the broad community of science and technology, advise the federal government, and provide service to the public, and the scientific and engineering communities. Because of my expertise in protein and carbohydrate nutrition in the prepartum and postpartum lactating dairy cow, I was asked to participate.

This update of the NRC will reevaluate the requirements and will provide an up-to-date, comprehensive review of the scientific literature on dairy cattle nutrition. This edition is intended as a guide for diet formulation and the nutritional management of dairy cattle during various phases of the life cycle. It will be a useful tool for producers, extension personnel, teachers, students, and research scientists.

Nutrient requirements of animals are determined in a variety of ways. The best way to measure all inputs and outputs is through the use of calorimetry chambers. To determine the energy value of feeds, dairy cattle are placed in these chambers to measure all nutrients consumed and all nutrients digested. All feces, urine and gases are collected and measured to determine the energetic efficiency of how various feedstuffs are utilized by the animal.

The majority of the energy value of feedstuffs for dairy cattle was determined in the 60's and 70's in calorimeters at USDA in Beltsville, MD. Since these data were developed, the amount of dry matter consumed and milk produced by the cow has increased. Therefore, these changes in energetic requirements must be reflected in the revised version of the NRC.

New recommendations will be made with consideration for the increased performance of different types of dairy cattle, the effects of the environment on nutrient requirements, and the effects of feed additives, and other types of growth enhancers and metabolic modifiers on nutrient requirements.

Quantitative information on rumen tissue requirements for degradable and undegradable protein will be incorporated, as well as new information on bioavailabilty of various nutrients, such as phosphorous. This revision also will include mathematical models to predict animal performance based on nutrient input/production response relationships.

These mathematical equations will be incorporated on a compact disk to provide the user with a method of predicting nutrient requirements of cattle under individual management situations.

There has been a great deal of new data since the last NRC that must be compiled, and new data sets must be developed and validated. For example, new and updated requirements for calves and growing heifers will be added as well updated requirements for the transition dairy cow. New information on availability of minerals will also be provided. All this information has to be put together into one program that has to be user friendly and then validated with other data sets to assure the numbers are correct.

A great deal of time and effort has gone into to this revised edition since the first committee meeting in February 1997. The goal of the NRC is for this publication to be printed sometime late in the year 2000.

Other committee members include: Jimmy Clark, University of Illinois, chair; David Beede, Michigan State University; Richard Erdman, University of Maryland; Ric Grummer, University of Wisconsin; Jesse Goff, USDA; Alice Pell, Cornell University; Chuck Schwab, University of New Hampshire; Jim Linn, University of Minnesota; Bill Weiss, Ohio State University; and Trevor Tompkins, Milk Specialties Co. These committee members represent some of the foremost dairy nutritionists in the country.

What To Do During Low Crop Prices

NORCROSS, Ga. — Winter is a time when many producers make decisions for the next season. This year, low crop prices will be causing many to take a hard look at their operations. What can a producer do to make his or her operation more profitable?

Profitability surveys have identified factors that lead to increased profitability. Surveys from Iowa, Kansas and Minnesota have shown that increased profitability comes from:

• Reducing costs. Assessment of a farm operation should not only be based upon total production, but also upon other factors, such as production efficiency. Spreading fixed costs over more bushels and more acres can improve efficiency. Cost cutting should be done wisely. Too much cost cutting reduces profits. The goal is to increase efficiency without endangering proven income-earning practices, such as higher yields. Assets such as land, machinery, etc., should be evaluated to determine if they add to the value of production. Land value should be carefully assessed, to ensure that prices paid reflect the land's productivity.

• Increasing yields. Higher yields lead to increased production. This translates into increased income and greater profitability. In addition, increased yields can lower the unit costs of production.

• Focusing on management. Higher profit farmers spend more time gathering information, analyzing choices, planning activities, and evaluating results. Formal education or continuing education develops mental tools that help these processes. Consider adopting new technology before it becomes standard practice. To find more time to conduct these activities, a farmer may find it wise to spend less time driving a tractor. Someone else can drive the tractor, but someone else can't make the farmer's own decisions. Try to adopt an optimistic view of the future. Optimism renews interest in learning more about the farming operation and how to improve it.

Potash and phosphate are essential for higher yields. Higher yields have been shown to lead to greater profitability.

But how can you know if potash or phosphate applications will be profitable? The answer is to test your soil. Soil tests are inexpensive but provide very valuable information. Knowing your soil test level allows you to follow well-researched recommendations. Consult university fertilizer recommendations in your area, but be prepared to make refinements for your own agronomic and economic circumstances. Local crop advisers can assist with that process. Many areas see added benefits of starter fertilizer applications, sometimes even at high or very high soil test levels.

In times of low crop prices, smart management decisions are critical to the sustainability of a farming operation. Lower costs, higher yields, and attention to soil test levels and a sound fertility program are essential components of a successful operation. A fertility program is not fat to be cut in lean times, but rather a guidepost that leads to survival.

Microfilming is recognized as the preservation reformatting medium of choice. Microfilming is a proven technology. Standards exist for the format itself, for the process of converting materials to film, and for its archival storage. Quality-produced microfilm stored in an environmentally-safe location has a shelf life of over 500 years.

Bottom line: Microfilming provides a permanent replacement for materials written or printed on poor quality (brittle) paper. Materials reformatted to microfilm will continue to be available for use by researchers, scholars, students, patrons, and the public at-large for generations to come.

Collating is a very labor intensive task. Generally all preservation staff assist with this phase of a filming project.

Another aspect of reel programming is preparing filming targets to be filmed along with the newspaper pages. Filming targets alert users on what can be found on each individual reel of film. Standard targets include: START, END OF REEL, PLEASE REWIND. Other targets typically included on each reel are title and author information, reel contents notes, name of the institution preparing the material for filming, funding information, and name of the microfilm vendor.

The first step in any microfilming project is to conduct an inspection of the material selected for filming. This process is known as collating. All materials are examined for its physical condition and completeness. Each page of each volumes is carefully checked to determine if there are any missing pages, torn or folded pages, or if any pages need to be repaired before filming takes place. If any pages are missing, every attempt is made to find replacements.

files, and photographs are in danger of extinction because of the acidic wood-pulp paper used in printing Acidic paper when exposed to light, temperature, humidity, and pollutants turns yellow and brittle within a short period of time

Frequently referred to as "slow fires," this paper deterioration problem began in the 1870's when paper manufacturers began making paper from woodpulp sized with acidic alum. Over time, the woodpulp paper absorbs moisture and acidic salts form, which react with the fibers of the paper The paper fibers slowly begin to break down, causing the paper to become brittle, weakened, yellowed, and eventually unusable. For several years now, many libraries and repositories have adopted numerous preservation methods to combat the deterioration of paper-based collections. One such preservation method used worldwide.

The following photographs document the Penn State University Libraries' preservation department's effort to convert the Lancaster Farming newspaper from its original paper format to microfilm is the activity of preservation reformatting. Reformatting by microfilming is considered the option of choice to preserve the intellectual contents (written and/or printed matter and illustrations) of crumbling papers.

Agriculture Conference August 9-11

NORCROSS, Ga. – The popular Information Agriculture Conference series will continue with InfoAg99, scheduled August 9-11. Organized by the Potash & Phosphate Institute (PPI), Foundation for Agronomic Research (FAR), and Purdue University, InfoAg99 will take place at the Stewart Center on the campus of Purdue University in West Lafayette, Ind.

The 1999 program will focus on adaptation of site-specific technologies and information systems related to crop production. Past conferences, in 1995, 1996, and 1997, provided effective forums which brought together diverse groups in production agriculture. The upcoming conference will feature analysis and interpretation of data and its incorporation into comprehensive nutrient management planning and decision-making, said Dr. Paul E. Fixen, PPI senior vice president and conference planning coordinator.

Component sections of the new Site-Specific Management Guidelines handbook will be presented.

In addition to an agenda of expert speakers and workshop sessions for smaller groups, there will again be an exhibit area where companies and organizations can display new products and services in data management, analysis, and communications technology.

A communications showcase will feature educators demonstrating how communications among the farmer, dealer, landlord, and banker can be improved to better use available resources for more profitable production. A "Cyber-Farm community" will demonstrate the potential of information technology.

The conference is expected to appeal to a cross section of people in agriculture, including top farmers, fertilizer dealers, consultant, certified crop advisors, farm mangers, government agency personnel (particularly Natural Resources Conservation Service), university researchers, teachers, extension specialists, and international participants.

Another key section of the program will highlight aspects of building a business around site-specific systems. Commerce experts will discuss service business opportunities for retailers and consultants. The Cyber-Dealer Workshop returns with a fresh look at putting the pieces together for a business plan.

Registration fee to attend the conference is $350 per person for payment received by July 10, and $450 thereafter. ## Dairyman To Dairyman

We fed molasses to ward off ecnomic problems related to $7 corn. What surprised us was that molasses kept our diet together and helped even out production and components from one cow to another.

We have continued this practice even though corn is currently much cheaper. Refusal feed and delivered feed stays the same. This should be a goal of a TMR. It is yours?

Wyoming County Couple Achievement Award Winners

SYRACUSE, N.Y. – Wyoming County's Peter and Roxanne Dueppengiesser were named winners of the New York Farm Bureau Achievement Award at the state farm organization's annual meeting at The Radisson-Hotel Syracuse in Syracuse, Dec. 7-10.

The Dueppengiessers edge out fellow competition finalists Orange County dairy farmer Adelia Pimm and Lewis County dairy farmer Joseph P. Shultz to win the 25th Achievement Award. The award was presented to the couple during Tuesday evening's opening night session.

According to Peter Dueppengiesser, the Achievement Award competition was "very difficult. Just getting the application done was difficult enough." The competition, he said, "was quite an undertaking. But it was enjoyable to look back at things we've done, and to ponder the challenges to come."

As State Achievement Award Winners, the Dueppengiessers received a $500 cash award from Dodge Truck and a $500 cash award from NYFB's YF & R Program. They also received an expense paid trip to the AFBF Annual Convention Jan. 11-14 in Albuquerque, N.M. to represent NYFB at the National Achievement Award Competition.

Dueppengiesser said that while the award will have his and his wife's name on it, "as all things go, it wasn't just two people. I have two brothers who are in business with me, and I would not have been able to do the things I've done without them. My father has been very supportive, as have our employees. Our names are on the award, but we couldn't have done it without them."

The Achievement Award competition is open to young farmers and ranchers (YF & R) between the ages of 18-35 who are actively engaged in farming. Leadership, Farm Bureau involvement, and community participation played key roles in the judging process. The winner was selected solely upon the effectiveness of both their submitted application and personal interviews by a panel of three judges, with demonstrated expertise in Farm Bureau, industry, and finance.

Judging this year's competition were Dan Athoe, vice president of Farm Direct, Agway, Inc.; Patrick Brennan, Bond Act coordinator for the State Department of Agriculture and markets; and Julie Suarez, legislative director for State Senator John "Randy" Kuhl

The Dueppengiessers have been operating as a family corporation for the past 12 years. Their Wyoming County operation employs 13 full-time workers and one part-time worker to care for 700 head of milkers plus young stock, as well as alfalfa and corn production. The dairy operation is a corporation, with the couple splitting the ownership equally between Peter and his two brothers.

Both are college graduates, with Peter earning an associated degree in animal science for the State University of New York (SUNY) Cobleskill and a bachelor's degree in agricultural economics from Cornell University. Roxanne earned a bachelor's degree in consumer economics business management from Cornell.

Both hold leadership positions within Farm Bureau. Peter is the president of the Wyoming County Farm Bureau served on the state Farm Bureau YF & R Committee (1994-1995) and as its chairman (1995-1996), was a member of the Farm Bureau Board of Directors (1995-1996), was a NYFB Discussion Meet Winner (December 1994) and American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF) Discussion Meet Finalist (January 1995). Roxanne served as secretary of the state YF & R Committee from 1994-96.

The couple has two sons, Jacob and Jared.

They are an outstanding couple, " said Sandra Prokop, New York Farm Bureau program specialist. "This year's competition also enjoyed great participation from our county farm bureaus and from Farm Bureau at all levels, not to mention community and commodity affiliations. Plus, the energy they've all put into their preparations show the progress agriculture has made, and the bright future it has."

Clarification

In last week's article about the Spring Poultry Banquet held at the Lancaster Host Resort, it was reported that PennAg Industries is planning to integrate the Pork Council into its organization within the next year. This refers to the creation of a new Pork Council within PennAg Industries, not to taking over the existing Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council, which is a completely separate organization.

Ala. Breeder Elected To Simmental Board

BOZEMAN, Mt. — W. Harrell Watts, a member of the American Simmental Association (ASA) board of trustees since 1994, has been elected chairman of the board, succeeding Bill Wentz, Olmito, Texas.

Watts, who previously held the posts of board vice chairman and treasurer, had also served as chairman of the growth & development committee for two years and on the executive committee for three years.

A graduate of Auburn University, Watts owns Simmentals of Alabama at Sardis where he maintains a herd of registered and commercial cows. His operation also includes cotton, timber, and hay production. A strong believer in utilizing EPDs in breeding programs, he has utilized artificial insemination and performance testing for 34 years and endorses the recommendations made by the Focus 2000 Conference.

W. Harrell Watts

"Carcass traits are going to be very important to the future of the beef industry," he said. "We must push for retained ownership of cattle in order to obtain the most reliable carcass data possible."

A member of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association, the Alabama Cattlemen's Association and numerous other cattle organizations, Watts is past president of the Alabama Simmental Association and is a founding member of the organization. He's also a former school board member, church board member, and a director for the county soil and water conservation district.

N.E. Compact Commission Sets Supply Management Hearing

corn prices, which had since plummeted.

The additional milk production resulted in the Compact Commission paying the USDA Commodity Credit Corporation $1.76 million in the fall of 1998 because the Compact is required to compensate the federal government for surplus purchases if milk production increases faster than the national average. The government had purchased excess dry milk and the Commission was charge for its pro rata share.

Then after making that payment, the Commission held a broad issue rule making hearing to take additional testimony on milk supplies and whether there was a need for supply management.

At that time, according to Becker, there were several proposals — some coming out of Massachusetts, some from Compact staff, and some from other places.

The staff reviewed the proposals and consolidated the testimony, and at the January 1999 meeting, the Commission decided it was time to consider the issue.

According to Becker, the Commission had collected testimony over about a nine-month period and sent all the information to its regulatory subcommittee, directing it to review it, do further study of milk production stastitics, consolidate the testimony from its spring 1998 meeting, and formal testimony collected in December 1998 and to come back to the commsision with recommendations.

At the Compact Commission's April meeting, it determined to enter into the proposed rulemaking.

"They are now wanting to hear from the public at large," he said.

As it is now, the results of all the information gathering and fact-finding are to be deliberated at the Commission's June meeting.

Prior to a permanent amendment being made to Compact over-order pricing regulations, there must first be a public comment period, commission deliberation, and then a producer referendum requiring a two-thirds majority vote of Compact producers.

As it is, the current supply management proposal is negative-incentive based, in that an assessment would be collected from all dairy producers, but given back only to those who have either maintained production or decreased it from one year to the next.

Those who increased their annual production above 1-percent for the year would forfeit any assessment refund.

A refund would be made on a flat rate for those who kept production increases under 1 percent, or decreased production.

Those who decreased production would receive the flat-rate refund and an additional refund based on the hundredweight of milk decreased from the prior year's production.

More specifically under the proposal, the Commission would collect an assessment from farmers at a rate of $250,000 per Compact monthly marketing pool, up to a total maximum of $3 million per year for the entire Compact.

The actual hearing announcement on the proposal was published in the April 19 Federal Register.

Though not a member state, the actions of the Compact Commission are of interest to those involved in the Pennsylvania dairy industry, because the state Legislature has been considering proposed legislation enabling the state to join the Compact should it be expanded and should it be reauthorized beyond Sept. 30.

State farm policy organizations, and several regional and national dairy producer and milk marketing cooperatives have been lobbying the state's elected officials for legislation to authorize the inclusion of Pennsylvania into the Compact.

(A version passed the Pa. Senate and is currently set to be reviewed by the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee. The state Legislature has until the end of June to act; a deadline tied into the state's fiscal year and the need for a state budget).

If the Compact is not reauthorized, several things would certainly happen: Becker and the other four full-time Compact staff members would be out of work; dairy pricing would revert to being influenced by regulation and administration by federal milk marketing orders based on supply and demand of milk and domestic market trade of manufactured commodities; commission members could stay in their respective states instead of meeting monthly in Concord, New Hampshire; and Pennsylvania and New York dairy producers who now ship milk to the New England states wouldn't receive a Compact price for their milk.

Also, the supply management proposal would be moot.

The Compact is controversial because the 1996 Farm Bill (Freedom to Farm Act) was designed to end federal government support programs of agriculture in an attempt to remove obstacles to free global trade.

The Compact was approved as a temporary measure to help the New England states, a region that produces less than 3 percent of the nation's milk supply, with a transition buffer.

From July 1997 through August of 1998 (July 1998 was the last over-order premium until this coming month), the Compact was able to pay dairy producers an additional $45 million, or an average of $11,000 per farm in the Compact region, according to Becker. He said the average price increase per hundred pounds of milk was 41 cents, representing a 2.5- to 3-percent increase over what would have been received.

The Compact Class I use has fluctuated from a high of 52.3 percent in October 1997 to a low of 43.5 percent in May 1998.

The Class I utilization rate month-over month did decline between the last half of July 97 to the last half of July 98, Becker said, and while the Class I volume went up about a million pounds from Octobert 1997 to October 1998, the total milk pool volume increased as well.

Becker said that, historically, since the 1950s, New York dairy farmers have contributed about 25 percent of the milk to the New England states (it has fluctuated some, especially when the Federal Order 2 price was higher), and now with the Compact New York's contribution is about 26 to 27 percent, Becker said.

"We have noticed more being diverted out since," Becker said. "As a result the Commission amended the regulations (as to how much) could be diverted and transferred out of the region that could still have Compact pricing."

He said those limits are seasonally adjusted for receiving plants — 8 percent of plant volume can be diverted in the fall months, 13 percent in the spring.

As state program leader, Watson provides leadership and support for the development, implementation, evaluation of statewide educational programs centering on all aspects of animal and plant agriculture, horticulture, and natural resource issues.

He actively develops funding and other resources and maintains training for cooperative extension and other outreach initiatives. Watson, with a tenured faculty position in the College's Department of Agronomy, works closely with administrators in the College of Agricultural Sciences, academic department heads, regional extension directors, faculty and county extension agents, and academic and outreach programs in other colleges within the university.

"We are extremely pleased," said Ted Alter, associate vice president for outreach and director of Penn State Cooperative Extension, "that Dr. Watson will be bringing his extensive experience and expertise to bear on agricultural and natural resource issues in Pennsylvania. Penn State Cooperative Extension is dedicated to providing research-based solutions and non-formal educational programs to citizens in all 67 counties of the commonwealth."

Watson's tenure at the University of Arizona began in 1984, when he was hired as a post-doctoral associate in the Department of Soils, Water and Engineering. Late that year, he was appointed to a faculty position as assistant extension specialist in the soil, water, and environmental science department. He was promoted to associate extension specialist in 1988 and earned his promotion to extension specialist and research scientist in 1996.

Before coming to the University of Arizona, Watson worked as a research scientist in the Commonwealth Scientific and Industrial Research Organization's Division of Environmental Mechanics in Canberra, Australia.

Watson earned a bachelor's degree in education/mathematics from Kent State University in 1973. He continued his education at the University of Arizona, earning a master's degree in 1979 and a doctorate in 1982 — both in soil and water science.

International Markets Focus Of Agribusiness Education Program

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Navigating the shifting landscape of international agriculture will be a theme of the second annual Penn State Agribusiness Executive Program, May 16-21 at the University Park campus.

The week-long intensive management seminar, sponsored by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences and Smeal College of Business Administration, is intended for upper-level executives and managers in forward-thinking agribusiness companies. While continuing its instruction in the latest business trends, the program also will zero in on growth areas within the field, according to conference coordinated Barry Zoumas, Penn State's Alan R. Warehime Professor of Agribusiness.

"The program integrates modern business concepts into the agricultural arena ways specific to this particular industry," he said. "We offer instruction in classic business principles while applying the newer, technology-driven techniques in an agribusiness context."

The seminar will cover topics such as developing market opportunities and business strategy, financial analysis, enhancing operations, and supply chain effectiveness — with extra attention. Zoumas said to the growth area of international agriculture.

"This year, we're delving into global agricultural issues and paying more attention to things like distribution cycles and logistics, and the difficulty of moving food through the food chain," he said. "A company's distribution chain and logistics are big issues for agribusiness systems. There's also some confusion surrounding foreign trade and other regulatory issues."

The program uses the Penn State Executive Program's successful "team" approach, combining feedback and contributions from program participants with more formal instruction from selected faculty from the business school and agricultural sciences in an intensive workshop atmosphere. In addition, the small class size fosters highly interactive learning.

Program faculty will be joined by respected presenters, including Gary Costley, chief executive officer of International Multifoods Corporation; Nina Fedoroff, Penn State's Willaman Professor of Life Sciences and director of the Life Sciences Consortium and Biotechnology Center; Tim Galvin, administrator of Foreign Agricultural Service for the U.S. Department of Agriculture; and Caren Glotfelty, the Maurice K. Goddard Professor of Forestry and Environmental Resource Conservation in Penn State's School of Forest Resources.

"Our contributing faculty are another strength of the program," Zoumas said. "They bring knowledge of cutting-edge, successful techniques that you won't find in any textbook."

Tuition for the 1999 program is $3,900, which includes the cost of instruction, program materials, textbooks, private room accommodations at the Nittany Lion Inn, airport limousine service, all meals, and use of most Penn State exercise and recreation facilities.

For more information on the program or content, contact Jim Menoher at (800) 311-6364 or write to Penn State Executive Programs, the Smeal College of Business Administration. # Feed Intake Indicates Weaning WOOSTER, Ohio — Ohio State University scientists are studying the grain intake of preweaned dairy calves and how it can be used to better indicate weaning age.

The greatest risks in calf rearing occur during the pre-weaning period, when the calf gets most of its sustenance from mother's milk. Maurice Eastridge, associate professor of animal sciences at Ohio State, said it's during this time that producers see the highest mortality, morbidity and incidence of disease.

Eastridge said if calves are to get off to a good start, they must have the necessary colostrum, properly formulated and fed milk replacer, vaccinations, and a clean environment in which to grow.

"It's important that the grain fed to these calves is palatable, highly digestible, and that it possesses characteristics that stimulate rumen development, enhance rumen volatile fatty acid production, and minimize bloat," he said.

Eastridge and colleagues from Land O'Lakes (formerly Countrymark Cooperative, Inc.), Indianapolis, have investigated the performance of calves fed different calf starters.

In one trial, a commercial calf starter was compared to a specially formulated calf starter with higher neutral detergent fiber (NDF) content. The source of the additional NDF was from highly digestible byproducts.

In the second trial, a flavor additive was included in a commercial calf starter to determine if the flavoring increased grain consumption by calves.

In the first study, a group of calves were fed one of two calf starters from the time they were three days old until they reached about 300 pounds. The two calf starters varied in the level of fiber they contained — 20.6 percent versus 36.3 percent NDF. All of the calves were fed colostrum for three days, and then milk replacer was fed at 10 percent of body weight until the calves began to consume 1.5 pounds of grain per day. Water was available free choice throughout the trial.

In the second study, a new group of calves was fed one of two calf starters with or without maple flavoring. These calves entered the study at birth and began receiving the feed and water free choice at about three days of age. Milk replacer was fed at 10 percent of body weight at birth. The calves were weaned when starter intake was at least 1.5 pounds per day for two consecutive days.

Eastridge found that grain intake during the first 49 days after birth was 2.04 and 2.21 pounds per day for the calves fed the control and high-fiber calf starters, respectively.

The average daily gain for these calves was 1.07 and 1.31 pounds per day.

The grain intake for calves in the second trial was slightly higher (averaging 2.26 ppd) and no benefit was observed from using the maple flavoring.

After analyzing the calves' average daily gain (ADG) and daily grain consumption, the scientists found that calf starters designed as total rations are very successful at achieving optimum growth by weaning age. A total ration calf starter is a complete mixture — meaning no hay is needed in addition to the feed.

It's important that the calf starter tastes good to the calves. Without good palatability, the calves won't be inclined to consume the amounts they need to perform. Flavoring products may be beneficial, but only if the calf starter has poor palatability to begin with.

Penn State Announces New Poultry Science Head

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Robert G. Elkin, professor of animal sciences at Purdue University, West Lafayette, Ind., has accepted the position of head of the Penn State Poultry Science Department, announced Tuesday this week.

In a notice mailed to faculty and staff of the Penn State College of Agricultural Sciences from the dean's office, Elkin will take the position as head of the department Aug. 1.

Elkin joined the faculty at Purdue as an assistant professor in 1981. He was promoted to associate professor in 1986 and to professor in 1999. His research has focused on modification of avian cholesterol and lipoprotein metabolism, and amino acid nutrition and metabolism in poultry.

Elkin has authored or co-authored 51 papers and 40 abstracts in refereed scientific journals and has delivered lectures at numerous state, national, and international research symposia. He has taught courses in laboratory techniques, monogastric nutrition, and natural toxicants in feedstuffs.

Elkin received his bachelor's degree in animal science from Penn State in 1975, his master's degree in nonruminant nutrition from Purdue in 1977, and his doctorate in nutritional biochemistry, also from Purdue, in 1981.

He succeeds Michael Hulet, Penn State associate professor of poultry science, who was interim department head since William Weaver retired in August 1998.

Elkin has won numerous honors, including the American Feed Industry Association Nutrition Research Award in 1997, an Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development Research Fellowship in 1995, a Fulbright Scholar Research Award in 1992-1993, and the American Egg Board Research Award in 1991. His work on the pharmacological reduction of egg cholesterol content has received popular coverage in the national news media.

Dairy Situation and Outlook

BOB CROPP
Dairy Marketing and Policy Specialist
University of Wisconsin Cooperative Extension
University of Wisconsin-Madison

The frequently asked question the past few days has been, why the drastic drop in farm level milk prices? The BFP, which was $17.34 per hundredweight for December 1998, dropped to $16.27 for January 1999 and all the way down to $10.27 for February 1999. The $10.27 BFP for February is partially the result of using the NASS survey 40 pound cheddar cheese prices to adjust the BFP. NASS cheese prices lag 10 days to two weeks behind changes in CME cheese prices. The CME price of 40 pound cheddar blocks declined from a high of $1.90 per pound early January to $1.25 per pound and recovered to $1.33 per pound where they have held. But because of the NASS cheese price lag, not much of this drop in cheese prices were captured in the calculated January BFP announced at $16.27. In calculating the February BFP, the survey of Minnesota and Wisconsin butter, powder and cheese plants showed they paid $14.72 for Grade B milk in January, not the announced $16 27. The $14.72 was the "base month" price used from which the change in milk value during February was subtracted due mainly to the change in NASS cheese prices for the month Because NASS cheese prices did not fully capture the January drop in cheese prices in the January BPF calculation, subtracting a major share of the cheese price drop in February from the lower $14.72 base month price, resulted in the low $10.27 calculated February BFP. So in reality, the announced January BFP of $16.27 overstated what was actually paid for Grade B milk in January. Likewise, the announced February BFP of $10.27 will likely turn out understating what was paid for Grade B milk during February.

But why the big drop in cheese prices? The answer lies in what is happening to milk production. Adverse weather negatively impacted milk production per cow during 1998. As a result, milk production increased only 0.9% for the year while commercial disappearance was up more than 2%. The result was record milk prices for the last quarter of the year. Milk production started to recover in October of last year. This year, both January and February have shown relatively strong growth in milk production, up from a year ago, 3.5% and 4.3% respectively, for the 20 reporting states. More favorable weather, relatively low feed prices, and relatively strong milk prices reduced herd culling and encouraged herd expansion, all of which are contributing to increases in milk production. For February, compared to a year ago, milk cow numbers were down only 0.2% while milk per cow was up 4.5%.

In the West, for the most part, states showed relatively strong increases in February milk production, compared to a year earlier, with production up 12.0% in Arizona, 10.9% in New Mexico, 8.7% in California, 8.1% in Idaho, and 4.7% in Washington. California is the state with the greatest comeback in milk production. For 1998, California showed only a 0.1% increase in milk production from a year earlier. Each of these states had more milk cows than a year ago, except Washington which had 0.8% fewer cows. Each had strong increases in milk per cow except Idaho, which had no change.

Milk production is also doing very well in the Upper Midwest. Milk production was up 2.8% in Wisconsin and 4.1% in Minnesota. Both increases were due to increases in milk per cow more than offsetting decreases in cow numbers. Cow numbers were down only 0.7% in Wisconsin and 1.8% in Minnesota.

In the Northeast, production was up 4.9% in Michigan, and 5.4% in New York. Both states had more milk cows and relatively strong milk per cow. But Ohio had only 0.3% more milk with increases in milk per cow slightly offsetting decreases in cow numbers, and Pennsylvania showed a decrease of 0.8%, the result of 1.6% fewer cows and only 0.7% more milk per cow.

Milk production is not very strong in the South and Southeast mainly due to a reduction in milk cows numbers. Milk cow numbers were down 1.3% in Florida, 5.6% in Kentucky, and 6.3% in Missouri. The result was an increase in milk production of only 1.4% in Florida, and decreases, respectively, of 5.1% and 1.0% in Kentucky and Missouri.

With more milk, the production of dairy products is naturally also up from a year ago. January butter production was up 7.7%, American cheese production up 1.9%, total cheese production up 2.9%, and nonfat dry milk production up 14.9%. What is somewhat encouraging for milk prices is that some of the increased milk production is going into butter and nonfat dry milk production and not all into the production of more cheese. This should help to keep cheese prices at a higher level and in turn farm level milk prices. Stocks of natural American cheese were at 411.3 million pounds on January 31st. While not burdensome, cheese stocks are more than adequate being 1.1% higher than 1998 and 7.2% higher than 1997.

So what lies ahead for milk prices? The March BFP will be higher than the $10.27 February BFP. In fact, it is very likely that the $10.27 February BFP will be the low for the year. How high the March BFP will be will depend on how much more than $10.27 did Minnesota and Wisconsin butter. milk powder and cheese plants pay for Grade B milk in February. Because of poor, if not negative plant margins experienced during the month of January, the plants will need to recover from some of these losses in February. There will not be much strengthening in the March BFP due to changes in cheese prices. The average NASS cheese price used in the February BFP calculation was $1.3010 per pound. For the week ending March 6th, the NASS price increased slightly to $1.3098 per pound. While prices at this level could yield a BFP around $12.00, the need for plants to recover from poor margins experienced in January is likely to result in a March BFP less than this. The BFP March futures settled at $11.30 on March 16th. My estimate is for a March BFP of around $11.40.

With milk production in the Northeast and Midwest approaching the seasonal flush, cheese prices will likely decline some the end of March or early April. The BFP will follow with perhaps another low near $10.75 for May before increasing slowly starting in June and peaking in October in the low $13.00 range. The average BFP for 1999 could be around $12.20 compared to $14.20 for 1998 and $12.05 for 1997. This assumes favorable weather this summer and fall and good crops. Milk production for the year is expected to be up more than 2% and commercial sales up less than this, about 1.8%, resulting in milk prices averaging less than 1998, but close to the 1997 average.

Progressive Dairymen's Cooperative Reports Good Year

TROY (Bradford Co.) — 1998 was a good year for members of Progressive Dairymen's Cooperative, according to a recent news release about the cooperative's recent annual meeting, at Edgewood Restaurant in Troy.

About 50 members and their families attended the banquet/meeting to review the cooperative's business and outlook, elect directors, and recognize member achievements.

The board reorganized during a meeting that followed the annual meeting.

James Pastos, of United Ag Services, discussed the dairy situation, market conditions and his opinion on the future.

Progressive Dairymen's Cooperative is affiliated with United Ag Services, of Seneca Falls, N.Y. United provides management, accounting, quality control, and employee and producer payroll services for small to medium-sized cooperatives, as well as for individual farming operations.

Pastos said that dairy farmers have enjoyed the best prices ever, the past few months, and they would continue through the winter months. He said the price would drop in spring and summer.

He said that season price increases would occur in late summer and fall.

Overall, he said 1999 milk prices will average slightly below 1998 (record pyear) but not be as low as 1997.

He said he wanted to strongly urge members to catch up on paying their bills and to refrain from purchasing new equipment, until the outlook for dairy prices became more certain.

He also said that members should contact their state legislators and ask that they pass necessary legislation for Pennsylvania to join the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact.

Pastos also announced a new service program being offered by United Ag Services, DairyImpact.

DairyImpact is a group buying program designed to enable producers to purchase inputs at discount prices. Through the DairyImpact program, dairy farmers are expected to have an opportunity to improve their bottom line, he said.

Presiding at the meeting was Vice President Don Hamilton, who was taking over for Douglas Stewart unable to attend for medical reasons.

Also present were Tioga County Dairy Princess Christina Baker, and Bradford County Alternate Dairy Princess Malissa Croft. The dairy royalty served milk punch and cheese and talked about their roles promoting the use of milk and dairy products.

Sandy Hamilton offered a blessing.

In cooperative business, re-elected to serve as cooperative directors were Verna Talmon of Ulster, and Jeffrey Ammerman of Athens.

Elected to the board were Donald Chamberlain of Mansfield.

The minutes and financial statements were approved as read, and patronage was disbursed at the end of the meeting.

J.W. Welch, secretary/treasurer, offered his opinion on the benefits of membership in the cooperative.

He said that the cooperative has always paid a patronage dividend, ever since the co-op was founded 10 years ago. He also said that a study into premium programs of cooperatives showed that Progressive Dairymen's and sister co-op Scenic Mountain both enjoyed the maximum net return, compared to other area cooperatives. At the same time, he said Progressive and Scenic co-ops do not require members to make equity payments.

Verna Talmon recommended that the cooperative send each member two copies of the premium program information — one to keep and one to pass on to a neighbor, in an effort to encourage quality producers to join the co-op.

In recognitions, Pastos presented the cooperative's top quality awards. First place were John and Bonnie Kendrick of Mainesburg, who received a plaque and a cash prize.

Others high quality producers recognized were Jeffrey Ammerman; Richard Carnright of Mainesburg; Victor and Verna Talmon; and Paul Allen of Granville Summit. Each received a qualilty certificate and a cash prize.

During the reorganizational meeting, Douglas Stewart was re-elected president, Don Hamilton was re-elected vice president, and J.W. Welch was re-elected secretary/treasurer.

Forage Helps Best Cows Produce More

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — Dairy cows already producing just over 110 pounds of milk per day increased production by an average of 11.5 pounds of milk when fed FullTime™ forage in a Michigan State University (MSU) study. Dry-matter intake increased an average 5.8 pounds per day for the high-producing cows.

"The more milk the cow is capable of producing in the first place, the higher the response to FullTime forage," said Ed Nimtz, Cargill Hybrid Seeds FullTime forage product manager.

"Improvements in milk production, dry-matter intake, and body condition scores of high-producing dairy cows resulted from enhanced neutral detergent fiber (NDF) digestibility of the forage.

Evaluating the effect of NDF digestibility on dairy cow performance has proven difficult because it is hard to find two forages that differ only in that trait. But Michigan State University researchers succeeded last year by comparing conventional corn silage and FullTime forage, both from Cargill Hybrid Seeds.

"Increasing dry-matter intake is especially important for cows in early lactation to prevent excessive loss of body condition and to increase peak milk yield," said Dr. Mike Allen, MSU extension forage specialist

"Improved NDF digestibility does not necessarily increase the energy density of a cow's diet. It does reduce physical rumen fill and allows greater feed intake," Allen said.

The MSU trials involved 32 Holstein cows fed rations containing corn silage made from either a conventional Cargill corn hybrid or a FullTime forage hybrid identical to the control except for the gene affecting low-lignin content.

The two corn hybrids were planted in adjacent fields on the MSU campus research farm. Both hybrids were chopped at 30 percent dry matter, fermented, and stored in adjacent bunker silos.

The cows were grouped according to days in milk, body weight, milk yield, and body condition score. Each group of cows was assigned to one of the rations for 28 days after which the rations were switched between groups so that all cows were offered a ration containing each hybrid for a period of 28 days.

Tests showed the silage made from FullTime forage was 0.8 units lower in lignin that the conventional silage. Diets were formulated for 19.6 percent crude protein, 31 percent NDF, and a forage to concentrate ratio of 56 to 44 percent.

Boyer's Lambert Organic Farm Emphasizes Ethnic, Heirloom Produce

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

NARVON (Lancaster Co.) — Linda Boyer believes that vegetable growers — and ultimately the general public — could be losing their heritage.

In fact, she's molded her community supported agriculture (CSA) program and her farm market, which emphasizes heirloom and ethnic vegetables, exactly on that premise.

Heirloom vegetables, which comprise a large percentage of what she grows on the seven acres of land near her home, are more durable, disease and pest hardy, healthy, and ultimately so good tasting, Boyer said.

With husband Leon, in the early '90s, Linda completed a lot of research, seeking out the best heirloom and ethnic vegetables she could find, gathering information from suppliers worldwide.

She points to the "Hillbilly" variety of bi-color tomatoes that keep setting fruit up until Thanksgiving. "Give it half a chance and it will go on forever," she said. She recalls the Pink Peach tomato, "rosy and sweet," she said, that feels like a garden peach but has the flavor and texture of a tomato. "You won't find that in a grocery store," she said with a smile.

Said Boyer, "I can't eat store-bought lettuce. It makes me physically sick."

Linda told a story of some customers from Maryland that traveled to the Quarryville Growers Market, where she maintains a stand. They took one look at the Russian black plum tomato, and weren't convinced it wasn't the best tomato they had ever seen. They took one free sample Boyer offered, purchased a quart basket, ate more in the car on the drive home, ran out, turned around, and came back for more.

"I do the stuff grandma did," said Boyer.

The key is to plant, cultivate, harvest, and present the vegetables in a way that brings back the memories of how good the heirloom vegetables tasted on the table during the holidays at Grandma's house.

Customers who are looking for the many varieties of peppers Boyer growers point out that she raises "the six hottest in the world," many of which are dried to make mild, hot, and superhot mixes. "I sold one customer by the bushel box," she said.

Heirloom vegetables, which comprise a large percentage of what she grows on the seven acres of land near her house, are more durable and soil-hardy and ultimately so good tasting and healthy, she noted. Together with husband Leon, in the early '90s, Linda completed a lot of research, seeking out the best heirloom and ethnic vegetables she can find, gathering information from suppliers worldwide.

Recently Linda and Leon (who works down the road at Conestoga Custom Kitchens) planted a 60-tree antique orchard, with standard and dwarf-sized trees, including apricots, peaches, different types of apples, sweet and sour cherries, plums, and nectarines. Cherries are big sellers, but the Boyers also sell different varieties of blueberries, raspberries, and strawberries.

New for Boyer this year are cherry tomatoes.

"I am going to have every color in the rainbow," she said. "The flavors and textures are fantastic."

This is the first year for the Lambert Farm CSA on the Lambert Road hillside just north of Churchtown. Already the Boyers have signed up seven members. The cost is $300 per season, which includes two hours of member garden labor. Those who don't wish to perform the hand weeding and other tasks are charged $350 per season.

Boyer said there is room for three more members. There are incentives for members to sign up others for the CSA.

The season lasts from 23-30 weeks, including spring planting, summer picking, and fall harvest. Boyer also offers weekly pick-your-own flower bouquets and a fresh farm-grown chicken or duck for the holidays.

Lambert Farm will provide to members asparagus, lima and snap beans, broccoli, brussels sprouts, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, celery, chard, chinese cabbage, collards, and corn (at least a dozen). They will also allow members to take home cucumbers, kale, lettuce, leeks, okra, onion, sugar, snap, and hull peas, and at least one pack of sweet, hot, and bell peppers.

The CSA also allows members at least one quart of potatoes, two pumpkins for eating during a season, radishes, spinach, squash, and sweet potato. The members are allowed one quart of tomatoes, in addition to turnips, Indian corn, popcorn, and raspberries, blueberries, strawberry, cherries, apples, plums, peaches, pears, and apricots. They will also allow one bunch of rhubarb, muskmelon or cantaloupe, one watermelon, herbs, and four eggplants.

Members can also pay on a monthly basis.

For the past five years, the Boyers have operated their own fresh market stand at the Quarryville Growers Market, which opens May 8. The market is located at Good's Store at the corner of routes 222 and 372. The market operates every Saturday through October from 8:30 a.m.-1 p.m.

It's been a hard hoe to operate, in starting the farmers' market, noted Boyer.

"We've had to fight tooth and nail, literally, to get it established," she said.

People come from many different locations — Philadelphia, Delaware, Virginia, and Maryland — to the market Saturdays during the season. Most business comes from Maryland even though the

DEP Finalizes CAFO Compliance Standards

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) has finalized environmental standards to protect ground and surface water from the impacts of large animal feeding operations, according to DEP Secretary James M. Seif.

"To make sure runoff and manure from large livestock feeding facilities do not pollute our ground and surface water, DEP has finalized specific permit and environmental standards to cover these operations," Seif said.

"Pennsylvania is the first state to comprehensively address the water-quality impacts of the design, construction and operation of large-scale animal feeding facilities; manure storage structures; and the application of manure from these operations to farm fields," he said.

The most stringent requirements are reserved for concentrated animal feeding operations (CAFOs) of 1,000 or more animal equivalent units that are of most concern to the public.

Farmers with smaller operations are covered by the same environmental performance standards, but have simplified, less expensive paperwork.

"The experience Pennsylvania gained over the late 14 years working cooperatively with the farm community and citizens under the Chesapeake Bay Program helped make these new standards not only protective, but practical," Seif said.

New concentrated animal feeding operations with more than 1,000 animal equivalent units, or those in special protection watersheds having between 300 and 1,000 animal equivalent units, will be required to meet these requirements:

• An individual federal National Pollution Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) water-quality permit with special conditions including self-monitoring and reporting; a pollution-prevention contingency plan to prevent or contain and clean up any spills; best management practices to control runoff from the site; and procedures for closing manure storage areas if needed. Public comment and local notice is required.

• A Part II state water-quality permit with special conditions covering the design, construction and operation of manure storage facilities; prohibiting facilities in wetlands or floodplains; and requiring storage facilities to be lined and have groundwater monitors. Public comment and local notice is required.

• Nutrient Management Plans, to ensure manure from these operations is properly managed and not over applied to farm fields, must be approved by county conservation districts before DEP issues its permit for these facilities.

• Erosion and Sedimentation Control Plans for fields where manure is spread by the permittee to control loss of topsoil and nutrients.

• A NPDES Stormwater Management permit to cover actual construction of the facility.

New, smaller animal feeding operations from 300 to 1,000 animal equivalent units would be covered by the same environmental performance standards, but simplified permit application requirements.

Existing feeding operations of 1,000 animal units or more will be required to obtain a general NPDES permit over the next year and have an engineer certify that any existing manure storage facilities meet engineering standards.

Existing operations of 300 to 1,000 units will be required to obtain a general permit over the next three years. The general permit is proposed for public comment before it is final and available.

An animal equivalent unit is equal to 1,000 pounds of animal weight and includes hogs, chickens, cattle or other livestock.

These new standards also will help Pennsylvania farmers meet water-quality protection requirements established by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency for concentrated animal feeding operations, and avoid the need to get separate state and federal water quality permits.

"I want to personally thank all the members of the special work group we established to help develop these standards," Seif said. "These volunteers—farm organizations, environmentalists and government agencies—worked hundreds of hours on this project."

"Nutrient-management policy should be environmentally sound and economically feasible," Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. said. "DEP has worked with agriculture stakeholders to achieve these two goals."

An independent Agriculture Development Advisory Board created by Senate Resolution 91 in December 1997 is developing a Best Management Practices Manual for large animal feeding operations that will cover issues related to controlling odors, siting facilities, studying livestock raising trends and resolving disputes that may occur in communities where facilities like this would locate.

These practices and a training course for facility operators are being developed in cooperation with the Pennsylvania State University Cooperative Extension Service.

The draft manual containing these standards should be available for review through the State Conservation Commission in late spring.

There are now four permit applications pending before DEP, for new large livestock operations covered by these requirements, in Dauphin, Franklin, Perry and Tioga counties. These applicants will have to meet the new standards and public participation requirements before a permit can be issued by DEP.

For more information on the environmental standards for animal feeding operations, visit DEP through the Pennsylvania homepage at www.state.pa.us, visit DEP directly at www.dep.state.pa.us (choose Subjects/Water Management/CAFOs); or contact Milt Lauch, chief of the Division of Wastewater Management at (717) 787-8184

Organic Farm

market is working on attracting customers from Lancaster city.

Boyer lives the farthest away from the auction. The market is geared to the smaller producers who seek an alternative outlet for their crops.

Growers are livestock or poultry farmers tending a few acres of vegetables on the side, Boyer noted.

For the stand, farm market members try to have corn ready for the July 4 holiday. But Boyer plants a wide variety of heirloom and ethnic vegetables for the market and the CSA.

For the market, the Boyers try to provide continuous corn, tomatoes, potatoes, and other vegetables. The market has had slow but steady growth.

The CSA is positioned the same way, Boyer noted.

The market is perfect for the small grower, she said, and provides an alterative outlet from the standard run of auctions or typical roadside stands.

One customer was looking for Italian eggplant one day, and was so impressed with what Boyer was offering that she handed her a large sum of money and didn't want the change. The customer told Boyer that they hadn't seen anything "as good or as fresh as this," she said. "They don't quarrel. They just hand you the money."

For Boyer, she names the three most important things to satisfying customers:

1. Present the produce in an attractive manner. "Really show it off," she said, with color and variety.

2. Offer free samples. She said that many people became set on yellow watermelon if offered the chance to taste it.

3. Keep recipes at the stand. "It's part of my repertoire," she said. "I collect cookbooks. I have gone out of my way to gather recipes."

She gathers information on heirloom, organic vegetables from Mother Earth News and other publications. She also pointed to several catalogs, including:

- Seeds of Change, P.O. Box 15700, Santa Fe, NM 87506-5700.
- Seed Savers, 3076 N. Winn Rd., Decorah, IA 52101.
- Fox Hollow Seed Company, P. O. Box 148, McGrann, PA 16236-0148.
- Heirloom Seeds, P.O. Box 245, W. Elizabeth, PA 15088-0245.
- The Cook's Garden, P.O. Box 535, Londonderry, VT 05148.

Boyer uses poultry and cow manure. She also makes a manure/compost barrel "tea" with other ingredients, including egg shells and compost materials, for garden fertilizer.

All weeds are hand-hoed. Boyer extensively uses biological insects, including praying mantis, lady bugs, and wasps. "I release them every year," she said.

For the first time this year, Boyer will be allowing beehives at the farm to aid in vegetable and fruit pollination.

"I also cultivate my birds," she said. They include bluebirds, sparrows, wrens, swifts, barn swallows, orioles, and woodpeckers. She maintains bird feeders and boxes. She plants flowers to draw butterflies.

Recently Linda and Leon (who works down the road at Conestoga Custom Kitchens) planted a 60-tree antique orchard, with standard and dwarf-sized trees, including apricots, peaches, apples, sweet and sour cherries, plums, and nectarines. Cherries are big sellers, but the Boyers also sell different varieties of blueberries, raspberries, and strawberries.

For the CSA, the Boyers are willing to be flexible to customer's demand. The CSA will holds its first member meeting on Tuesday, May 4, at 6 p.m. at the Lambert Farm.

Members will be allowed to pick up their produce every Tuesdays in the evening, from 5 p.m.-9 p.m., noted Linda.

CSAs, Boyer said, allow the family to spend time together and relax in a healthy atmosphere. It also provides an educational experience for the entire family.

Boyer keeps a wide variety of farm animals, including mini-Southdown sheep, a donkey, heirloom geese and ducks, and a 200-hen layer operation with white and brown eggs for customers.

Eventually, as part of the Lambert Farm plan, the Boyers hope to eventually operate a greenhouse and grow hydroponic tomatoes.

She noted that the CSA is one way to keep the heritage of working the land, growing food for the table, alive. Eventually, she believes the CSA itself can feed 50 families — and that would be enough so the Boyers can retire from other work and devote all their time to the CSA.

Growers are livestock or poultry farmers, for the most part, growing a few acres of vegetables on the side, Boyer noted.

Dairylea Cooperative CEO Addresses Future Farmers

MORRISVILLE, N.Y. — Dairylea Cooperative Chief Executive Officer Rick Smith spoke to 30 members of the SUNY Morrisville's Dairy Club at the college recently, giving them insight into the future of dairy farming and agriculture in general.

"In terms of careers in dairy and agriculture, the opportunities are immense," Smith said. "We need more young people coming up in agriculture, as well as in areas that touch and support agriculture."

Smith discussed how Dairylea – through its subsidiary, Agri-Services, LLC – is providing farmers with an ever expanding array of services that goes far beyond the marketing of milk. "We are providing services related to computers and lab testing, insurance, investing, lending and leasing, as well as the purchasing of inputs and supplies," he said. "There is a tremendous future in agriculture for people who are getting into these areas."

According to Smith, there is a substantial change occurring in the dairy industry, as a result of mergers and acquisitions. Yet, he reassured the students that that does not equal less opportunities for the future.

"We see mergers and acquisitions almost on a weekly basis. There is fewer of everything and everything left is bigger. Yet, if you were to graduate and start up a diary farm down the road here, withing a week you'd have ten companies calling you to buy what you make. That's pretty good. There aren't too many industries where you can get out of college, start up your own business, and already have several companies waiting to buy your product," he said.

Smith sad that the promising future of dairy and agriculture in the Northeast is evidenced by the strong agricultural infrastructure in the region, which in turn has brought many national and international dairy companies to invest and operate within the region.

"Why are huge processing companies like Bols Wessanen, Nestle, Valio, and Besnier so largely invested here in the Northeast? Because of the growth potential here, our access to a large international customer base, and the land and resources that we have. They have realized that there is tremendous value here they can't get anywhere else," he said.

Smith also encouraged the students by explaining that those who choose to be involved in production agriculture can have a better quality of life than previous generations on the farm. By specializing in one area, Smith said, farmers can do what they enjoy most and get some time off in the process.

"It used to be that Mom and Dad did everything. But going forward, farmers should think more about specializing, and joining forces with other farmers for the betterment of both parties. Some people are better at some things than others. Why not let someone else worry about the crops while you take care of the herd, if that's what your enjoy most," Smith said.

In addition, Smith also explained that by expanding an operation, and finding good employees to be part of the farm team, farmers can have more flexibility and have the opportunity for more time off the farm.

Smith commended programs such as SUNY Morrisville's Dairy Club and Cornell University's Dairy Fellows.

"This Dairy Club and their Dairy Fellows are wonderful programs. They expose you to more of what is out there – and the more you're exposed to, the better you'll do," said Smith.

Consolidated Official: AgChoice Farm Credit Is Born

YORK (York Co.) – AgChoice Farm Credit is official! Extensive planning by 36 farmer- elected directors, stockholder approval by its cooperative owners, and regulatory approval have resulted in the consolidation of the former Northeastern, PennWest, and York Farm Credits into AgChoice Farm Credit, ACA.

Farm Credit Associations are farmer-owned cooperatives that make long-term farm and country home loans; intermediate-term loans for machinery, equipment, and building; and short-term production loans. Other financial services available through AgChoice Farm Credit are credit life insurance, crop insurance, record keeping and tax services, farm business consulting, leasing, and appraisal services. AgChoice Farm Credit has an alliance with American Express Financial Advisors, which offers a variety of financial products and services.

AgChoice Farm Credit provides more than $525 million in long- and short-term loans, along with related services, to more than 10,000 customers in 52 counties in northeastern, central, and western Pennsylvania. It is affiliated with the AgFirst Farm Credit Bank, part of the nationwide Farm Credit System, the nation's leading agricultural leading group. AgChoice Farm Credit has 18 branch offices located conveniently throughout its territory.

Allyn L. Lamb, Chief Executive Officer of the individual associations, now assumes that position for AgChoice Farm Credit. "We are very pleased that our consolidation process is now complete and official" said Lamb. "There has been a lot of preparation for this moment, and it has finally arrived. This consolidation has brought the best of three former Farm Credit associations into a new structure that will have the capacity and ability to serve the state's number-one industry, agriculture, as it continues to change and grow. As always, our customers come first, and I feel that they will be very pleased with the new association."

How Low Is Too Low For Somatic Cell Count?

GEORGE F. W. HAENLEIN
Extension Dairy Specialist
University of Delaware

NEWARK, Del. – Years ago, when the somatic cell count (SCC) was introduced as a quick and fairly reliable monitor of udder health and milk quality (this was for milk from cows, but later was applied to goat and sheep milk as well), the maximum allowable level was 1.5 million SCC per milliliter of milk.

A few years later this maximum level was reduced to 1 million and then to 750,000, where it has remained for cow milk.

Because of physiological differences in milk secretion between goats and cows, however, the goat milk level is still 1 million.

There is a push to reduce this maximum level further to 400,000 or less.

Proponents argue that in Europe the maximum allowable level is already at 400,000, putting United States dairy farmers at a competitive disadvantage in international trade.

Also, it is argued that many United States dairy farmers already have successfully achieved such low levels routinely, so that a change would not create hardship; this refers to the level in the composite total milk of all cows in a herd, the so-called bulk-milk-tank somatic cell count.

Individual cows may deviate from that average level at times, depending on individual physiological and pathological conditions. Pathological conditions, of course, will be subject to treatment or culling of the cow and efforts of breeding selection against it.

The widespread reduction from 1.5 million to almost one-tenth that level is a great success story for our dairy industry's efforts in giving the consumer the best possible quality of milk in a span of only 25 years.

This has been achieved through the combined efforts of ever better cow and herd sanitation procedures and equipment and through the effects of genetic selection.

How much further can this reduction be pushed? Is the count of somatic cells in milk an evil that it should be eliminated altogether?

Somatic cells are mostly leukocytes, which are normal constituents in all body fluids and blood circulation. They are the watchdogs and aggressive defenders against invading bacteria and other harmful microoganisms.

If not for the presence of these leukocytes, our bodies and those of animals would suffer constantly under the harmful infections and attacks of the many microoganisms present in our environment, despite strong sanitation procedures.

Leukocytes in blood and body fluids are invaluable, migrating to microbial attack sites, if necessary in great numbers, to ensure health and survival of the animal. They are necessary defenders of body and organ health, and in the case of dairy animals, of the mammary gland.

Does this mean that a certain minimum number of leukocytes must always be present to assure health and prevent major mastitis outbreaks? And, if so, what is the minimum number?

Obviously, if one draws a graph and plots a line from 1.5 million to 1 million and to 750,000, and then extrapolates down that line, the count could, theoretically, reach zero.

But would that make sense, or worse, is it even advisable for optimum defense of the body against bacterial invasions?

Some research studies help to answer this question for best strategy on the dairy farm. Penn State University researchers reported in the "Journal of the American Veterinary medicine Association" (volume 192, No. 6, pages 761-765, 1988) that the incidence of clinical coliform mastitis was significantly higher in low bulk-milk-tank somatic-cell-count herds (LSCC) (<0.15 million).

Yet the incidence of clinical mastitis due to two of the most prevalent offenders-Streptococcus agalactiae and Staphylococcus aureus bacteria-was significantly higher in high bulk-milk-tank-somatic-cell-count herds (HSCC) (<0.7 million).

They also reported that LSCC herds had a high incidence of clinical mastitis during the first month of lactation, whereas HSCC herds had clinical mastitis uniformly during the entire lactation period. Other studies have also noted that HSCC cow udder quarters were more resistant to E. coli infection than cows with LSCC.

A new study in the Netherlands examined this question again, reporting ("Journal of Dairy Science" 81:411-419, 1998) under their conditions of LSCC - <0.15 million compared to HSCC of only <0.4 million.

At both low levels, there was no difference in the number of clinical mastitis cases. However, in the LSCC herds there was a greater, more widespread range of clinical mastitis with more severe cases than in the HSCC herds.

Also, clinical mastitis due to gram-negative bacteria-E. coli, Klebsiella, Pseudomonas-occurred more often in LSCC herds, while HSCC herds had more clinical mastitis cases due to Staphylococcus aureus, Streptococcus agalactiae and Streptococcus dysgalactiae, confirming the earlier Penn State study results.

So do these studies mean that diary herds with low somatic cell counts lose more money due to mastitis than herds with higher somatic cell counts?

The Penn State finding of more mastitis in early lactation in LSCC herds is significant in more than one way.

It is true that HSCC herds are more resistant to E. Coli infections, which are prevalent in early lactation, then LSCC herds are at increased risk to those mastitis infections.

Moreover, a new study from Tennessee ("Journal of Dairy Science" 81:1285-1290) showed that cows with mastitis in early lactation had significantly greater numbers of services per conception (2.9 vs. 1.6), more days to conception (137 vs. 92) and more days to first service (94 vs. 71) than cows without mastitis in early lactation.

"Our cows have increased in milk production to 22,408 since coming on the AIM program in April of 1998. We use some BST, but not on high peaking cows. It had been over 2 years since any of our cows had peaked over 120 lb. milk per day. We now have cows over that level and are holding higher production longer. Our March 1998 test was 70 lb. milk at 155 Days in milk. Our March 1999 test was 72.3 lb. milk at 187 Days in Milk!

We are especially happy with the increase in our herd average. The forages we are feeding this year, just aren't as good as last year's. The ability to customize the AIM to our specific forages has helped us to keep production increasing.

In addition to the custom AIM supplement and AIM top dress for our milking herd, we are using the total UltraBALANCE® calf, heifer, and dry cow pro-grams. We are very happy with the new UltraBALANCE® calf starter. Calves start eating it earlier and really take off.

We are very happy with the service from Sensenig's Feed Mill.

Miller Plant Farm Blooms With Springtime

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — In 1929, the stock market crashed and the nation's economy began its slide into the deep financial pit which would come to be known as the Great Depression.

But at a family farm south of the growing city of York, Jacob and Ada Miller were expanding their agriculture enterprise with a building addition. The new endeavor was a small greenhouse, facing south and attached to their farm home.

Miller's goal was to get a head start on the vegetable seedlings they planted each year to supply their bustling produce business. Then, as now, the earliest produce commanded the best prices; the indoor start would give Miller's tomatoes and peppers a three-week advance in the competitive downtown farmers' markets.

"And when he was finished with his vegetable plants, Grandma would start flower seedlings," relates David Miller. The third-generation horticulturist now operates the greatly-expanded Miller Plant Farm on Indian Rock Dam Road with his nephew and business partner, Steve Slyder. His parents, John and Betty Miller, are "retired," but still put in long days helping with the family business.

In January, Miller Plant Farm was named Agribusiness of the Year by the York Chamber of Commerce. Three generations of family members remain actively involved in the diverse enterprises of more than 60,000 square feet of space in 27 greenhouses and working bays, retail plant and produce sales, field crops, a herd of beef cattle and maintaining stands at two area farmers' markets.

As Jacob Miller's success with his early seedlings became known, neighbors urged him to start extras for them to purchase. Started in sand, the fledgling plants were sold bare root, wrapped in newspaper. Seedlings were also one more attraction for the J.L. Miller customers at the bustling city farmers' markets, where city housewives shopped several times weekly for fresh produce and meats.

While two days each week "tending market" is still part of the Miller Plant Farms operation, on-farm sales have become a rapidly expanding part of current business. That enterprise peaks in mid-to-late spring, when both wholesale and retail plant customers generate a steady line of traffic in and out the farm lane. Customers are from as close as neighbors up the road to businesses in adjoining states.

The earliest plantings of seeds start in February, with the pace picking up in March; by April, transplanting becomes a non-stop task for the crew of ladies who devote their workdays to the job. In addition, spring holidays bring a high demand for blooming potted plants ready for the retail side's Easter and Mother's Day flower-buying season."

"May is a real hectic month," says Miller in understatement. "We try to refill the greenhouses for another turn of plants, get field work done, plant produce crops outside. It just about runs you ragged."

Meanwhile, planning ahead never ends. While customers may still be buying some tail-end annuals to fill empty spots in their summer gardens, Miller must be making arrangements to accommodate the thousands of Christmas poinsettia cuttings which arrive in August.

Seedlings play a vital role in the Miller Plant Farm business and, like all babies, are delicate, with special needs. To maximize their seedling success, Miller utilizes specialized equipment, some purchased and some he designed and built.

A vacuum seeder, which has made starting even the tiniest seeds more efficient, is a table-top piece of equipment which works somewhat comparably to a field drill for grain. Prepared flats filled with tiny square sections of planting medium are fed through the seeder, which is equipped with an electric eye and tucks a seed into each miniature "pot." Because each tiny plant begins growing in

Though "retired," Betty Miller often prepares lunch for more than a dozen of the Miller Plant Farm work crew, as well as continues to help in the greenhouse operations, like gathering this cart of sprightly pansies for spring sales.

Decorate, Entertain, Garden With Style

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Ideas for decorating, entertaining, and gardening with style made the annual Kitchen Kaper Tulip Tour a visual delight for more than 600 people on Monday.

"I like this tour because it's hard for me to envision what something looks like on paper. But if I can see a home layout, I have a better idea if it will work for me," said a tour participant.

The 12th annual tour sponsored by the Woman's Club of Ephrata featured nine sites. Homes on the tour vary from the pricey to the more modest. Some are filled with rare antiques, family heirlooms, collectable art, and artifacts from world travels. Decorating styles vary from formal to comfortable eclectic, but each one sparks unique ideas to take home and incorporate into one's own individual style.

Decorate, Entertain, Garden

Perhaps it's the furniture arrangement, a wall stencil, a new way to display momentoes, a dining room centerpiece, or billowing fabric draped softly across a sequence of windows that sparks an idea. Always popular are the food samples that a a different restaurant serves at each stop. This year's participating restaurants included Lily's On Main, The Black Horse Restaurant, Sweet Encounters, Doneckers Restaurant, Akron Restaurant, Country Pride, Sunset Diner, and food prepared by the Woman's Club.

Awe-inspiring floral decorations were arranged by La Fleur Boutique of Doneckers, Royers Flower Shop of Ephrata, Brossman's Flower Shop, and Gabby's Place.

As customary, the tour included a bed and breakfast. The 1777 House, a Donecker's Guest House at 301 W. Main St., Ephrata, a stately ten-guestroom home appointed with fine antiques, was this year's feature.

The house has been restored to preserve historical integrity, retaining original stone masonry and tile flooring. It's difficult to fathom that tile flooring could weather the abuse of centuries of use as a tavern, as a inn, a large family, and now as a bed and breakfast. But the handsome tile floor with its unique pattern demonstrates the artistic abilities and accomplished craftsmanship.

Marble fireplaces, 38 antique hooked rugs, stenciled armoirs in almost every room, . A Carriage House has been turned into multilevel guests rooms with lofts. Although Jucuzzis and modern conveniences have been added, the rooms maintain a primitive country look. Hand-loomed rugs are draped in unusual ways across the walls. Ice boxes and televisions are disguised within handcrafted wooden cupboards. Unusual antique pieces and accessories help create an aura of both serenity and historical significance.

The Susan Ann Lewis home, an example of a contemporary multilevel home, was decorated with hand-painted floral designs on the walls and a mixture of French pieces and family heirlooms.

The David and Nicole Sheaffer home, a spacious contemporary design with a two-story open foyer, showed how to incorporate family room, kitchen, and breakfast area into an eye-appealing but comfortable living space.

Pat and Jerry Imhoff's home, a raised rancher, was filled with momentos and art work from travels to Holland, England, and Italy.

The Harnish Farm's home situated on 15 acres, is built of stone and logs with Cloister influence. The llama farm was featured in the April 3 issue of this paper.

Crafts by local artisians were displayed and sold at the Ephrata Church of the Brethren, the starting point for the tour.

The Eicher Arts Center, a historic landmark, was open for tour and served as the site where The Ephrata Woman's Club served cookies and beverages.

One day they aren't there.

The next day they are.

That's how quickly the most traditional and maligned blooms of springtime appear when all the conditions get right.

One day you have that perfect, green lawn, looking like a sparkling, new carpet around your home. The next, Mother Nature has sprinkled her cheery, springtime confetti all about your pristine, mowed-within-an-inch-of-its-life bluegrass.

Dandelions.

Bah! Humbug! Weeds!

Sez who?

Well, no, dandelions don't carry the social significance of, say, a rose or an orchid. They don't match the fragrance of a carnation or a butterfly bush or a heliotrope. Or exude the majestic aura of a perfectly formed iris.

Dandelion stems don't lend themselves well to artistic arrangements. Nor do they hold up in a casual bouquet with the stamina of a chrysanthemum, or a zinnia, or a host of cheery, durable daisies. In fact, picked and plunked into a vase of water, dandelions will wilt into a limp mop.

But who could deny the beauty of their brilliant, almost-neon yellow? Their myriad of miniscule, pointed petals, perfectly shaped and layered into a mound of gold? Their attraction to toddlers too innocent to know or care that dandelions have been relegated to the renegade side of the plant world and who lovingly pick a bouquet for you?

Is it just coincidence that the early wild flowers of spring echo the bright, optimistic colors of the sky: yellow for sunshine and blues reflecting the heavens overhead? As the dandelions suddenly burst on the scene in full, if somewhat coarse, blossoms, dainty wild violets smile with clear blue faces in color contrast and natural companionship.

And, at least in our yard, both of these uncultivated plants bloom at the feet of the cascades of yellow forsythias. Our resident cardinal pair likes to pause in the forsythia enroute to the bird feeder, the male's brilliant red in dramatic color-contrast to the glowing forsythia. And cool weather this year extended their breathtaking beauty far longer than usual, along with the clumps of daffodils—yellow (and lots of whites, too)—scattered among the flowerbeds.

Slowly, other colors begin to introduce themselves into the landscape, as a few pink hyacinths venture out under the contoneaster bush and coral tulips push up among the late daffodils on a bank.

But nothing is more indicative of the season than those ubiquitous chips of yellow which scatter themselves about, even venturing into places where more "civilized" plants rarely go.

We have dandelions blooming from between the cracks of a sidewalk. We have dandelions blooming between paving stones forming a patio base. We have dandelions blooming among retaining walls and pushed up along the edge of protruding old maple tree roots, where virtually nothing else dares to intrude.

Under our live-and-let-live lawn policy, dandelions are pretty much left alone in our yard, to do their thing, then disappear until another year. Some weeds, like thistles, find themselves ousted, but dandelions are tolerated.

Besides, we recently had a cow calf with such a huge bull calf that it injured her pelvis. She was turned out in the yard, close by, for exercise. When a herdmate developed a severe udder infection that threw her off feed, she likewise was sent to the yard for fresh green grass, one of the few things she could eat in her stress.

With a couple of cows wandering about the yard, dandelion blooms are almost welcome by comparison with other lawn "ornamentation." At least with dandelions, you don't have to watch carefully where you step.

One day they're here. And then, suddenly, they aren't.

If only the other "ornamentation" disappeared as quickly.

Taking Time by Rebecca Escott

Turn Off the Television

Studies document that watching more than one to two hours of television per day (even "good," educational television) was associated with lower school performance and lower IQ scores. One particular study found that having the TV on as "background noise," when no one was obviously watching it, limited language development in young children.

To me, the obvious response to these studies is: 1) use television very selectively, and 2) when possible turn it off. Family life is wild enough. Television just adds one more thing to juggle, one more distraction to keep us from going outside, one more excuse to keep us from reading a good book or having an important conversation.

The National Institute on Media and Family reports that the average child and adolescent spends between 21 and 28 hours per week watching television. Children spend more time watching television than any other activity except sleeping. This is particularly harmful for young children, under 5 years of age, who are at critical stages for language and cognitive skill development. For them, television viewing displaces time that could be spent on other activities which would help their learning. One very noticeable area is where television viewing replaces reading with children.

When you turn the television off, find a book to read with your children. Or designate one night a week as a television-free night where everyone reads instead of watching television. You can be the difference. Help turn off the television and turn kids on to reading.

Reading is just one option when the television is turned off. Since the television is off, start bath time early. But make it a special occasion – double or triple the amount of bubble bath you normally use. Kids will have a great time making bubble sculptures, piling and blowing away mountains of suds. You may find yourself in hysterics, too.

If you want to get some fresh air, try a family game of HackySack™. I imagine it's been awhile since many of you played that game in the high school parking lot or on the college green. Your kids will get a chuckle at your efforts, and you may be humbled by your lack of flexibility. It's like playing with a hula hoop. Every time I try, I find myself saying, "I used to be able to do this! Why can't I now?"

For those families who can't find a HackySack™, you can play your own version of the game. Roll up two unmatched socks. Place them inside a third sock and tie it shut with a rubber band. Now start the game. The goal is to toss the sock in the air and keep it from touching the ground by ricocheting it off your feet, knees, head, etc. The use of hands is not allowed. This is great practice for the budding soccer player! How many kicks or how many seconds can your family keep the sock moving?

The National Institute on Media and Family also encourages families to make the following choices in an effort to "tame the tube:"

Don't place a television in a child's room.

Set up rules about when the television can be watched (for example, not before school, not until homework is done, only on weekends, etc.)

Turn the television off during meal times.

If the television is on, watch it as a family and discuss the storyline/content.

Like many other good decisions in life, these actions take your time, but the payoff is worth it for your children and your family

Bone Up On Calcium With These Recipes

Calcium and bone health go hand-in-hand.

Increasing scientific evidence indicates that adequate calcium intake reduces the risk of osteoporosis, a potentially crippling disease of thin and fragile bones.

According to the National Institute of Health, osteoporosis affects more than 28 million Americans.

If you do not get enough calcium from your daily diet to regulate body functions, your body will leech or "rob" calcium from your bones to make up the difference. Over time, this will reduce bone strength and lead to osteoporosis.

Most adults need between 1,000 and 1,500 milligrams of calcium every day.

"Drinking at least three 8-ounce glasses of milk each day is one of the easiest ways to get the calcium you need," said Lisa Heimbach, SUN Area Dairy Princess.

She recommends substituting milk for water and other liquid ingredients in recipes as a great way to boost calcium intake. "Because milk is 90 percent water, it makes sense to substitute milk to enhance the flavor in soups, noodles, mashed potatoes, and other dishes, while increasing the nutritional value," Lisa said.

Other good sources of calcium include the following: 8-ounces plain yogurt (450 mg); 1-ounce cheese (200 mg); 3-ounces sardines with bones (370 mg); one cup broccoli (90 mg); one cup cooked soybeans (130 mg).

Calcium-fortified foods such as orange juice is another good source of calcium.

SUN Area Dairy Princess writes that the booklet, "Famous Faces Make It Better With Milk," includes calcium-rich recipes and cooking with milk tips that show how easy it is to include enough calcium in your diet. To receive your free copy of the recipe booklet, call 1-800-WHY MILK or visit the website www.whymilk.com.

YASMINE BLEETH'S ISLAND SMOOTHIE

2 cups fat free or 1-percent low-fat milk
1 cup mango or papaya sorbet
½ cup banana slices or canned crushed pineapple
Lime slices (optional)

Place all ingredients, except lime, in blender container. Cover with top and process until smooth, about one minute. Pour into frosted glasses; garnish with lime slices if desired. Makes 2 servings.

CHOCOLATE CHEESECAKE

Crust:
14 honey-cinnamon graham crackers
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
2 tablespoons butter, melted

Filling:
3 egg whites at room temperature
15-ounces ricotta cheese
⅓ cup sour cream
¾ cup granulated sugar
¼ cup unsweetened cocoa powder
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Lightly grease the bottom and sides of an 8-inch springform pan. Make the crust by crushing the graham crackers in a paper or plastic bag using a rolling pin or mallet. Mix the graham cracker crumbs, sugar, and melted butter and place in bottom of springform pan. Press along the bottom of the pan and about 1¼ -inches up the sides of the pan. Heat the oven to 350 degrees. Put all filling ingredients in a blender and blend until smooth (scraping down the sides 2 or 3 times) for about two minutes. Pour batter into prepared pan and bake 30-35 minutes or until filling is set (the center will jiggle slightly). Turn off oven, but leave the cake in for another 5 minutes. Cool the cake in the pan on a wire rack for no more than one hour. Refrigerate uncovered until chilled. Then loosely cover and refrigerate for at least two hours. To decorate, use powdered sugar.

Enter Dairy Recipe Contest

June Dairy Month is almost here. That means it is time to enter Lancaster Farming's annual Dairy Recipe Drawing.

To enter the drawing, select your favorite recipe, which must include a substantial amount of at least one dairy product. Dairy ingredients include milk, cream, sour cream, whipped cream, butter, yogurt, buttermilk, dry milk, ice cream, and all hard or soft cheeses. The recipe can specify either whole, low-fat or non-fat dairy products.

Please check your recipe ingredients carefully. Margarine and non-dairy substitutes such as whipped topping do not qualify as dairy products.

Clearly print or type your recipe. Be sure to give accurate measurements, temperatures, times, and sizes of baking dishes to use. We reserve the right to disqualify entries if these guidelines are not followed.

The difference between this contest and the weekly recipes is that your are asked to include a few paragraphs about yourself and your family. Although it is not required, a photograph of you or with your family adds a wonderful touch to accompany the printed submission. Photos will be returned if you write your name and address on the back of the photo.

Only one entry per family allowed. This contest is for adults who are 18-years-old or older, not children. Send your recipe, photo, and accompanying information with your complete address. If we do not have your complete address, we cannot mail your prize if you win.

Send entries immediately. Envelopes must be postmarked by June 1 to be eligible for the drawing. Winners will be selected through a drawing and will be sent a prize. Look for a picture of the prizes in upcoming issues of this paper. Winners will be announced in the July 3rd issue of Lancaster Farming.

Send entries to Lou Ann Good, Lancaster Farming Dairy Recipe Contest, P.O. Box 609, 1 E. Main St., Ephrata, PA 17522.

Preparing for Y2K

Three winters ago, after facing what seemed like a ton of snow with only two (seemingly) small shovels, my husband and I decided to buy a snow blower.

Never again, we vowed, would be be caught without the proper preparation for such a storm!

Looking back, buying the snow blower was the best weather insurance we could have bought—because we have had hardly any snow since. Undoubtedly, if we had not made this purchase, every winter would have met us with a big pile of white.

While we are a little disappointed that we have never gotten to try our equipment out, it seems to be better safe than sorry (and sore from shoveling). That's the way I tend to think of the challenge of "Y2K."

"Y2K," or the "Millennium Bug," are terms used when we talk about the Year 2000 computer problem. This problem was planted years ago, with seeds that may come to fruition as the year ends. In a nutshell, in the 1950s, 1960s and 1970s—when computers were first built—computer programmers used two numbers instead of four, to save space, when indicating the year. For example, 1963 was abbreviated as "63" and 1991 as "91." Many of the systems that were set up back then were supposed to be changed as equipment was modernized, so that computers would interpret "00" as 2000 rather than 1900.

Unfortunately, out of habit or because of cost cutting, many computer programmers continued to use the two number format when developing newer systems rather than four, making this concern a real one for us today. Many computers, and the software they run, will not continue to do their job when they show 01/01/00 (January 1, 2000). Some people believe that since they don't own a computer, they will not be affected – but this concern reaches beyond just computer hardware. Small computers, called microprocessors or computer chips, run machines such as elevators, VCRs and common household appliances. Banks, accountants, and doctors' offices keep computerized records important to all of us. Companies that supply water and electricity also rely on computers and microprocessors, which means that all of us have ways computers affect our daily lives, whether we realize it or not.

Because computers touch our lives in many ways, it is important to know what is reasonable to do in response to the "Y2K" problem, and what is not. Some people have been contacted by people selling a service or product that is supposed to remedy mishaps that the year 2000 might bring. Close reviews of the claims made, or opinions of a reliable, unbiased sources, are helpful in protecting yourself from fraud.

In addition, many people have advocated stockpiling months of water, food, cash and medicine to prepare for potential emergencies. While some preparation for Y2K may be necessary, in reality, if everyone begins to create a stockpile, it will be people, and not computers, that will create the shortages that are feared.

So, what should a person do?

According to the American Red Cross, you should prepare for the year 2000 like you would prepare for a severe winter storm—by keeping a one to two week supply of essential food, water, and medicine. Our state and federal governments, the electrical power companies, and banking institutions have been preparing for the beginning of next year for some time, and those things that might happen on the first day of 2000 should be small, and short-lived. Emergency management personnel have reported that, of the systems that do not work correctly on January 1, 80 percent will be back online within three days.

In the same way a snowstorm would cause brown-outs, Y2K may cause some electrical, gas, water and sewer system disruption. This means preparing to keep warm and comfortable, to be able to cook food and have light in our houses safely.

Just as a snow storm might cause you to be unable to get to a pharmacy or grocery store, or cause the store to be closed, so Year 2000 problems may cause checkout scanners not to work correctly, or delay deliveries of medicine and food items to your area. In such an emergency, a few canned or dried food favorites, and several weeks of your needed medication, will be welcome, and keep things as close to normal as possible.

If you wish to prepare for your "Y2K" storm, you'll want to review the information on the Red Cross website, http://www.redcross.org/, or stop in at your county Cooperative Extension Office to pick up a copy of the pamphlet, "Consumers and the Year 2000 (Y2K)." Both give a clear checklist of steps that everyone might take to be ready for emergencies.

Maybe you won't need the precautions any more than we seem to have needed our snowblower—but they say "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." By following the guidelines set, in preparing over the next eight months, we'll all be able to welcome the new year on January 1.

Cruise For Calcium

ROSEMONT, Ill. — This spring and summer, a fleet of "milk mustache mobiles" will be rolling through 100 cities across the country as part of the nation's largest grassroots campaign to educate Americans about the health benefits of milk, according to Dairy Management Inc.™ which represents dairy farmers throughout the nation.

The "Milk Mustache Mobile 100-City Cruise for Calcium" is part of a $187 million integrated milk marketing plan developed and funded by U.S. dairy farmers and processors to help increase fluid milk sales.

"The national marketing plan, together with stepped-up marketing efforts of branded companies to promote milk, will help build strong demand," says Charles Powell, vice president of milk marketing for Dairy Management Inc.™.

"When the 'Cruise for Calcium' tour visits the region, the organizations will work with local dairy processors, schools, hospitals, grocery stores, and others to help spread the word on dairy's health benefits," says Powell. "Health professionals will conduct bone density testing for those at risk of osteoporosis to underscore the importance of calcium as part of a healthy diet over a lifetime. We want consumers to know there's not a 'quick fix' for calcium deficiencies — and it's never too early to start drinking more milk."

Besides bone density testing, the tour also will offer free blood pressure tests.

Life Lion Helicopter Appears At Farm Safety Day

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

PORT ROYAL (Juniata Co.) — "Almost every accident happens because someone has made a mistake," extension director Dave Filson began. "And to prevent accidents, everyone must learn how to make the right decisions."

Everyone included the 106 youngsters who attended Farm Safety Day in early April at the Port Royal Fairgrounds. They wanted to learn how to make the right decisions.

What if an unfriendly dog approaches you?

Should you mow if the guards aren't on the lawn mower?

Should you really climb as high as you want in that old Maple tree?

This Farm Safety Day continues to be a popular Cooperative Extension attraction, drawing participants, community specialists, and extension agents from Juniata, Perry, and Mifflin Counties. This year featured two new programs, a safety program geared specifically for children four to seven year olds and a CPR program for teens and adults.

At the end of the day, everyone gathered outside to watch a staged rescue scene, complete with ambulance and the Life Lion helicopter. The scene even attracted children and parents from the surrounding neighborhood who gathered to watch the Life Lion take off.

Johnny's farm adventure began when his mother gave him an important assignment. With serious consideration, he tied his shoe laces tightly, buttoned his jacket securely, pushed his cap down snugly, and turned his senses to full alert.

He stepped cautiously out of the house and immediately dodged a rake handle that came whizzing past his ear. He'd stepped on the upturned tines! Who had left the rake in that position? He placed the rake in the tool shed where it belonged.

Coming out of the tool shed, Johnny was tempted to inspect some broken glass in the flower bed beside the shed, but he knew he could get cut. He chose not to touch it. Then he spied the lawn mower in the middle of the yard. He used to love riding on it with his dad, but he won't be doing that anymore. He learned the "no seat - no riding" rule at the farm safety camp last week. If a riding mower, tractor, all terrain vehicle, or other piece of machinery has only one seat, only one person may be on it. He's always tempted to climb aboard as a passenger because it's so much fun, but he doesn't want to get hurt. No seat - no riding. That's how he's going to stay safe.

Johnny swung his milk container as he walked under the huge maple tree in his backyard. He smiled, thinking of these long hot summer days when he and his neighbor dared each other to climb higher. It sure was fun – until his friend fell out of the tree and broke his leg.

As Johnny rounded the end of the corn crib, he came face to muzzle with a stray dog! He stopped and stood perfectly still.

What did he learn at Farm Safety Camp?

Be a tree! If a strange dog gets too close, pretend to be a tree!

He'll chase you if you run, Johnny remembered. If I were playing on the ground, I'd lay face down, cover my head with my hands while protecting my ears with my elbows, and pretend to be a log. The stray dog sniffed Johnny's stinky, old barn shoes and slowly walked away.

Johnny entered the milkhouse and filled his milk pail. He felt proud that he'd made it safely through treacherous territory. He'd made the right decisions and stayed safe. On his way back to the house, he'll cut through the barn in spite of the temptations – cute newborn calves with their dangerous, protective mothers and fun but smothering grain in the gravity wagon. He planned to avoid these. His mother will be proud of him for getting the milk, but he was already proud of himself for keeping safe by making all the right decisions.

About 105 youngsters attend Farm Safety Day at the Port Royal Fairgrounds. To prevent accidents, you must learn how to make the right decisions, they were told.

Mosses — the spongy green clumps you see growing on logs and trees — are related to some of the earliest plants on Earth.
A handful of mosses existed on Earth as long as 245 million years ago, and more than 100 species were around 66 million years ago. Today scientists have found about 15,000 different species of moss. They mostly vary in size — from microscopic to 40 inches long — and in how they reproduce.
Plants that are more evolved make new plants through seeds. Mosses though still create more moss plants the same way they did millions of years ago. They spread spores, which are like tiny packets of cells. Each cell has the capability to grow into a new plant. Most mosses make spores in a capsule attached to a stalk. When the conditions are right, the capsule pops open, sending millions of spores out into the atmosphere. If the spore lands in a place with just the right amount of moisture and light, it will grow into a new moss plant. Water is really important for mosses. Because they don't have roots, they absorb all their water through the plants' leaf like surfaces.
Mossy green carpets thrive on the north sides of many trees and buildings — those spots usually don't dry out fast and they have a bit of shade. But don't try to find your way by the moss patterns in a woods. The heavy cover of leaves makes woods ideal places for moss to grow all over — not just north!

May 1st! Some folks think of fieldwork, some of gardening and others of wild flowers. By this time, many are already finished blooming. The bloodroot with it's bleeding stems and the liverleaf of hepatica bloomed in March. Indians dyed their clothes and blankets with the orange-red juice from the bloodroot plant. Today it's roots are used in making cough medicines.

The other Sunday afternoon, a group from our church, visited Shenk's Wildflower Preserve in the lower end of Lancaster county. Here one can not only see a variety of woodland flowers but a vast quantity of wild flowers. There are hillsides covered with Virginia bluebells. These often have pink buds before they open. There were large quantities s of Dutchman's Breeches whose flowers resemble clothes worn by Hollanders.

As we walked along the wide paths, with many other people, we saw a few Jack-in-the-pulpit plants and quite a few yellow Adder's Tongue sometimes called dogtooth violet. There were also Solomon's Seal and blue phlox.

The meadow where our house is located contains some of these wild flowers but not as many as years ago when I took my younger sisters for spring walks. My father's sheep destroyed some plants but they could not reach the wild columbines that grew anchored in rock crevices.

May first also reminds me of the special day when we were told to wash our faces in the dew if we wanted to get rid of our freckles. Of course, we did not dare to speak to anyone before we crept outside to rub our faces in the grass. What a silly routine that was.

Water from Hurricane Mitch was still standing in some of the fields when Lehman and Martin went to help people prepare the fields for planting.

Plight Of Honduran Farmers Not Forgotten

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

ROTHSVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Six months after Hurricane Mitch devastated Central America, most Americans have forgotten the horrific sights shown on television of mud slides and angry waters that wiped out whole villages. As many as 9,000 lives were lost and two million were left homeless.

Many people probably don't know that Hurricane Mitch is considered the worst hurricane in more than a century.

At the time, people wanted to help, but not knowing how to assist a country so distant from their own home, most Americans soon forgot.

But not Carl Lehman. In the aftermath of the hurricane, Lehman and Walter Martin, co-workers at Binkley and Hurst, Rothsville, traveled to San Pedro Sula, Honduras. Their mission was to train Hondurans on how to use three new tractors to prepare land once again to produce food for the villagers.

Mennonite Central Committee (MCC) purchased the tractors at at a discount from Binkley and Hurst, which also equipped the tractors for Honduras at no extra charge. Lehman and Martin volunteered to give up vacation time to accompany the tractors and to teach the appointed recipients on how to drive and maintain the tractors.

Six months after Hurricane Mitch devastated Central America, most Americans have forgotten the horrific sights shown on television of mud slides and angry waters that wiped out whole villages. As many as 9,000 lives were lost and two million were left homeless. But not Carl Lehman.

About three months after the hurricane, Lehman and Martin traveled to Honduras to set up the disc harrows and chisel plows and to train Hondurans on using the three Case tractors.

Water was still standing in some of the fields. Fish swam in the flooded fields as Brahmin cattle wandered about. Lehman and Martin listened to stories of people stuck in palm trees for seven days in order to stay clear of the raging waters. They heard of whole communities that escaped to the hills where theywere trapped for 21 days. Helicopters dropped food, water, and supplies to help the displaced villagers survive.

"I expected to see a poor country. I did — especially areas that were flooded," Lehman said.

But he was unprepared for the beauty of the countryside as greenery emerged from barren, mud-caked soil.

He was impressed by the villagers eagerness to help with the rebuilding, by their uncomplaining attitudes, and the ease he felt in working side by side with people of another language.

As flood waters receded, it left behind hard-crusted soil. Some areas were covered with heavy vines that needed to be chopped up with a disc.

The disc harrows and chisel plows needed to be put together piece by piece. A crowd of onlookers watched and several Hondurans assisted with the assembling.

"With a chisel plow, the soil worked up nice and looks fertile," Lehman said.

The climate enables two corn crops to be harvested from the land annually.

Miller Plant Farm Blooms With Springtime

its own separate square, the fragile seedlings suffer minimal transplant shock when moved to market packs or pots.

"Seeders are expensive and require a little more management, but enable us to transplant twice as fast," Miller says of the technology.

Seeded flats are moved into a germination structure Miller designed, where gentle heat is added as needed by tapping warm water from the heating boilers into a series of piping which runs through the unit. Flats in the warm, humid area are watched closely and moved from the heated unit to the cool, airy atmosphere of the greenhouses as soon as a percentage of the seeds have germinated.

"Don't call it dirt," Miller reminds his employees of the blends of potting soil which they mix as needed in a 3-cubic-yard mixer. All greenhouses are sterilized annually and new flats used for many seedling crops, especially peppers and tomatos.

Watering is critical in green house operations, with temperatures in the enclosed environment susceptible to abrupt changes, as weather conditions may swing from sunshine to clouds many times daily. And, since plant species vary in their responses to temperatures and soil moisture, watering expertise is determining factor to flower and vegetable plant success.

"Our watering is still done by hand, except for our hanging baskets. The person at the end of the hose makes a crop," he emphasizes. "And not watering is sometimes the most important part of it. You have to really watch the plants during long, cloudy spells."

Ventilation is likewise important, aimed at keeping the inside environment of lower humidity than the outside air to dry plant foliage and limit dampness-related diseases. Newer houses at Miller's are equipped with more automatic venting systems than the older structures, but are still monitored carefully.

Improvements in structure plastic have enabled greenhouse operators to re-cover their houses much less frequently than when plastics first began replacing glass. Replacing plastic every year was one of the jobs Miller remembers working with as a teen-ager helping with the family operation after school.

"When we change plastic on a house, we do it in early morning, at first light, when the air is the most calm," he explains. Generally, this maintenance chore is on the schedule for late fall's chilly mornings, before breezes pick up.

When snow blankets the double-plastic-layer structures, even those empty of plant crops, thermostats are pushed up to generate more heat to melt the accumulation. Miller explains that snow tends to hang on the sides of the structures, which may cause the support pipes to buckle sideways.

During the blizzard of January 1996, props were shoved under leaning support pipes which threatened to collapse greenhouses under the weight of the heavy snow accumulation. Miller recalls being on the greenhouse roof and scooping off snow with buckets, then hearing the props fall to the ground as the pipes sprung back into shape once freed of their burden. While their heating fuel bill escalated, the structures were saved, with only some minor damage.

"I like to see rusty snowplows," quips Miller, of the past two winters which have been relatively mild, with minimal amounts of snow in the York area.

While some flower seedlings are purchased from specialty growers, the Millers start from seed all their vegetable plants.

"That way, we can get the specific varieties we want," he reasons. "We try new varieties for our own use and then can grow seedlings of the ones that do well for our plant customers in successive seasons."

Some 20 acres of sweet corn is grown, planted at weekly intervals from late April through July for succession of harvest. Another five acres are cropped in cantaloupes. These two summer mainstays supply the needs of many of the Miller's wholesale customers, while plantings of tomatoes, peppers and watermelons supplement the variety available for their loyal retail following. All vine crops, like melons, are cultivated under plastic, with trickle irrigation used for maximum moisture utilization.

"In one week last year, we picked 12,000 cantaloupes," remembers Miller with a grin. "Plant breeders have made great strides in developing cantaloupes. Athena and Eclipse are two much firmer varieties which will hold a day or so. That gives us much more flexibility."

Miller Plant Farm business partner Steve Slyder quips that he is "the mover" of the operation. His moving often entails a tractor and handling equipment to facilitate the constant movement of plant materials and supplies through the 60,000-square-foot-under-roof complex.

In fact, the cantaloupes consumers are purchasing right now in the markets may well be the Athena melon, a variety popular with growers along the East Coast. Harvest begins in Florida and moves north with the season to supply the retail pipeline.

September brings a work force disruption to Millers' busy schedule, with many of their school-age employees returning to classes. While plant work has slowed, the produce continues to ripen. Another cutting of hay might be ready for baling for the 20-30 head of cattle they fatten annually and the fall decorative mainstays — gourds and pumpkins — are ripe for harvest. Some 60 acres of field corn are also beginning to dry down. Often, retirees help round out the work crew.

Poinsettias command center stage in the fall greenhouse season, with shipments of cuttings usually scheduled at three different intervals. The mid-August cuttings grow into the large multiple-bloom plants, while later cuttings provide more individual plants. At peak, some 12,000 poinsettia plants are growing in the complex.

"We live at the latitude where October 6 is the date for bloom initiation for our poinsettias," notes Miller of the darkness-sensitive, traditional holiday plant. "We might begin to see a hint of color on some by the end of the month; and by Thanksgiving, the earliest are ready to go."

Diane Miller handles much of the business' steady stream of office and paperwork, as well as overseeing the busy market and retailing enterprises. She and Dave married in 1974, two years after he graduated and began full-time employment with the family operation.

"She learned fast," he says in praise of his wife, who along with overseeing retail sales, has computerized the office records systems.

Although the Miller farm is a few miles off any major traffic artery, growing numbers of customers regularly stop at the sales area to purchase their seedling and potted plant needs right at the family farm.

"Customers seem to like coming out to the greenhouses," acknowledges Miller. "There seems to be a sense of satisfaction at buying right at the source, at picking up plants right where they were grown and having hundreds of them to select from. We believe quality and value play a role in serving customers. And we also try to grow some potted plants, some perennials, some herbs that aren't available just anywhere."

Four bays of the growing area, adjoining the busy sales room, are kept to customers for browsing and plant shopping. While they like to visit with customers about plant needs and answer questions, the Millers are limited in time available for that due to demands of the business. So Miller hopes to expand customer education with more signs posted around the greenhouses offering plant and cultivation information; they have also developed a customer brochure. With retail growing rapidly, Miller's are already thinking ahead to possible future expansion. But quality of life, and family time, are very important among their life priorities.

For instance, once the fall harvest is wrapped up, and the poinsettia crop waiting in the wings, they do take advantage of a slight break in the busy schedule.

"If everything is under control, we go hunting," said Miller of this favorite family pastime. "Mornings and evenings, we'll be in the woods." Attesting to their success are numerous trophy mounts which hang in the business office.

Dave and Diane have three children, Courtney, 21 and a professional barber, 18-year-old Whitney, a physical therapy major, and Dustyn, 16, a sophomore at Dallastown High School.

"He takes a lot of kidding about being called 'Dusty Miller'," jokes Miller of his son sharing the popular name of the white-foliaged bedding plant. "But there was no pun intended." Dusty, adds his dad, does help with the business and shows some interest in carrying on the horticultural tradition.

"But it will be up to him," he emphasizes of their son's future career choice.

A leader in the region's horticulture industry, Miller is involved in the York County Vegetable Growers Association and the Penn State Horticulture Council, a curriculum advisory panel for the university. He is serving his fifth year on the state-appointed Pennsylvania Vegetable and Marketing Research Board which developed and implemented an acreage assessment among its members for research and promotion.

In 1997, more than $63,000 was contributed by the 1,247 participating produce growers who supported the program, with funding awarded to the most cost-effective university and/or private firms' programs targeting selected research projects. A sweet corn pest monitoring program is just one of the research studies currently under way. Some matching funds from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture help with promotional efforts, including the Simply Delicious logo developed for use with the program. The Board holds a referendum every five years among the growers to determine support and levels of voluntary acreage checkoffs for the program.

Such community leadership efforts, development of the retail business and willingness to work with the agriculture industry all played a role in the Miller Plant Farm's recognition by the York Chamber of Commerce.

"Knowing some of the earlier recipients," Miller says modestly, "it's quite an honor for us to have been selected."

Dave Miller checks on the Niagra seeder unit, which seeds 512 small "cells" in trays, a seed to each cell, using an electric eye. The specialized unit makes handling small, costly seeds more uniform and resulting seedlings suffer less transplant shock.

Delmarva Agrability Project Conducts Survey

NEWARK, Del. — A survey to assess the challenges and needs of farmers with disabilities is being conducted in Delaware and the 10 counties that make up Maryland's Eastern Shore.

The goal of the questionnaire is to gather information so that educational programs and services can be developed that better serve these farmers and their families.

The survey is being sponsored by the Cooperative Extension system of the universities of Delaware and Maryland, the Delaware and Maryland Agricultural Statistics Services, and Easter Seals.

The Delmarva Agrability Project (DAP), which is funded by the U.S. Department of Agriculture to help farmers, their families and employees continue to earn their livelihoods in agriculture, is new to the Delmarva Peninsula and represents a unique partnership between the two universities and Easter Seals.

DAP will provide educational programs and technical assistance to agricultural producers with disabilities as well as promote networking and more collaborative efforts among service providers and health care professionals.

Conditions and disabilities that DAP will address include amputation, arthritis, stroke, hearing impairments, back pain, multiple sclerosis, muscular distrophy, respiratory problems, visual impairments and other physical conditions.

Among the services DAP will provide are equipment adaptation, assessing agricultural work sites and tasks, mobilizing and coordinating services and resources, facilitating rural independent living, coordinating peer counseling, and support groups. Agricultural safety and secondary injury prevention also will be a component of the program.

Data gathered through the survey will be used to set priorities and to better design programs specific to the agricultural community. All information will be held in the strictest confidence.

If you have questions about the survey or the use of the data collected, call project coordinator Ron Jester at 302-856-7303, or contact the Easter Seal case worker toll-free at 877-204-FARM.

Honduran Farmers

Most of the rural inhabitants farm two to six acre plots. Because work is done by hand, farming is time consuming and hard manual labor. Typically, the Hondurans poke three corn kernels into the soil, take a step and poke three more in the soil for corn planting. This results in lots of bare spots and poor yields.

Despite local agronomists' instruction that corn would grow better if seeds were planted seven inches apart, it is difficult for the people to change. The belief that it is more work to plant seeds individually keeps most rural farmers from changing their planting traditions.

Fields planted using tractors will demonstrate the differences in yield.

Binkley and Hurst said the tractors will help these farmers. The tractors will be overseen by an agronomist who works with Mennonite Social Services. He will be responsible for maintenance. For a stipend, small farmers will be able to have their land prepared with the tractor.

Tractors are not completely new to the area. Wealthy landowners use them, but this is the first time, to Lehman's knowlege, that tractors will be available for small farmers in the area.

An interpreter was on hand to assist in communication between the American visitors and the Hondurans.

Not all the residents in the area the two men visited receive their livelihood from the land. Several women were sewing baseballs in their homes. The women receive about a penny a minute and it takes about 11 minutes to complete a baseball. They complete about 50 balls a day at a time schedule agreeable to them. Most start about 1 p.m. and work until night.

Lehman, a corn planter technician with Binkley and Hurst for nine years, resides in Mechanicsburg area with his wife Mabel. They have seven children, three at home.

Martin, an 18-year employee of Binkley and Hurst, lives on a Lancaster County farmette with his wife Wilma and children.

Lehman is organizing a group of people from the church he attends, Slate Hill Mennonite, to travel to Honduras and continue to assist in the rebuilding. Binkley and Hurst are interested in helping send a two row corn planter to be used with the tractors. The corn planter could also be used to plant other seeds such as beans.

Lehman is also hoping a cultivator can be shipped to assist the Hondurans.

When the two men were assisting in Honduras, they were impressed that Hector the agronomist had offered to support a 13-year-old boy whose family had lost everything. Hector lives on a limited income. Binkley and Hurst Brothers and their employees offered to help support the 13-year-olds' educational pursuits in addition to the $1,700 they donated for relief efforts in the area.

Don Hoover, salesman at Binkley and Hurst, explained the company's involvement in relief efforts. He said, "We're asked to bear each other's burdens. It's a fundamental biblical principle to care for those in need and to love your neighbor as yourself."

"It will take years for the people to recover from the storm," Lehman said. "I want to do what I can to help. After seeing the country, I can not forget it."

Why are John Deere Round Balers the No. 1 choice of farmers? Well, they often cost less initially than you'd expect. And John Deere balers have traditionally held their value better than any other make or model (see chart).

But the main reason John Deere Round Balers seem to fly off dealer lots: They simply perform better in the field. The patented variable-chamber design with staggered, diamond-tread belts helps you build better bales that stand up straight in the field with less sagging. # Community Fest To Benefit Friendship Community

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — The whole family will enjoy two days of fun and entertainment, while benefitting people with disabilities, at the Sixth annual Friendship Community Fest and Auction, May 7 and 8, at 1149 E. Oregon Road, Lititz, next to Landis Homes.

On Friday the weekend will kickoff with a chicken barbeque meal at 5 p.m. and a concert of spirited music by the All American Cornet Band at 7 p.m.

The All American Cornet Band's music reflects the values and flavor of a time when people built barns together, had quilting bees, and made their own music. Dedicated to the renewal of spirited American band music, they will play selections by composers Sousa, Fillmore, and Goldman as well as ballads, ragtime, blues, medleys, waltzes, hymns, showtunes, marches, and specialties with soloists. Many of the pieces they will play have been originally transcribed or composed for them.

The bandmaster, Dwight Weaver of Atglen, plays the cornet and trumpet, as well as the rubber hose. For the past 20 years, Weaver has directed the band at Avon Grove High School. He is a graduate of McCaskey High School with degrees from West Chester University and Villanova University.

The former bandmaster, David Tuttle, who has been a long-term member of the band, founded Brian's House, an organization serving people with disabilities in West Chester.

The All American Cornet Band was founded in 1975 by Dr. Kenneth Laudermilch, Ph.D., professor of trumpet at West Chester University who will be the featured soloist for this concert. He and his wife Nancy, live in New Holland and have a son, Keith, who has a disability and is on Friendship Community's waiting list for residential programs. Currently, 120 people are on this list.

The support raised through the concert on Friday and the events on Saturday will benefit Friendship's current residential programs (serving 115 adults) and help develop additional programs for people on the waiting list, like Keith.

Auction merchandise will be on display Friday night and crafts and plants will be available for purchase. The chicken barbeque meal includes a half of chicken, coleslaw, applesauce, baked beans, roll, chips, pickles, drinks, ice cream, and a brownie.

Funds raised at the Friendship Community Fest and Auction help provide community homes for adults with developmental disabilities. The homelike surroundings help adults such as Neil Burkholder, Barry Grossman, and Dan Toews improve their social and independent living skills. The three residents also help Lancaster County Weeklies with newspaper mailings.

Saturday's activities will begin at 9 a.m. with an auction for children, a time where they can place their own bids for special items like Barbie with a wheelchair, Beanie Babies, paint sets, games, baseball cards, and more. The auction for adults will follow at 10 a.m. Specialty items will be sold at 11:30 a.m. This includes antiques, collectibles, sports memorabilia, quilts, wall hangings, Winross trucks, artwork, and special items made by Friendship residents.

Entertainment for the day includes Christian radio station WJTL broadcasting live from the Fest and Auction over the lunch hour, a sing-a-long with Anne Stuart, and music by the Bavarian Barons Band.

Children's activities at the Kid's Korner run from 9:30 a.m. - 2 p.m. and will offer pony rides, Bouncing Moonwalk, a Mother's Day craft to make, sand art, miniature golf, ambulance and fire truck display, games and more. The food court will feature the annual 100-foot sub, French fries, pork barbeque sandwiches, baked potatoes, fresh fruit, coffee and bagels, and a wide assortment of baked goods. Crafts and bedding plants will also be for sale.

The proceeds from these events will benefit Friendship Community and will be held at 1149 E. Oregon Road, Lititz. Watch for directional signs along Routes 501 and 272. Admission to both days is free. The events will be held rain or shine.

Friendship Community offers a comprehensive program of residential and social services for people with developmental disabilities and their families in Lancaster County. Started in 1972, Friendship currently serves 115 individuals in 15 community homes, various apartment settings and private homes.

For more information call Friendship Community at (717) 656-2466 ext. 104 or 106. The number of tickets for the chicken barbeque meal on Friday are limited. No take outs. Concert tickets are unlimited.

ANSWER — For the reader who wanted scales weighing 30-50 pounds, Karen Mull has a Toledo scales. She thinks the company may still be in business. Write to Toledo Scale Co., 2912 Paxton St., Harrisburg, PA. (717) 564-6000.

Lloyd Ohl has an old Dayton Style #1580 Capacity 30-pound scale. He will sell it for $50. Write to him at 6113 Limeport Pike, Coopersburg, PA 18036. Can send picture of the scale if desired.

ANSWER — A reader would like to know where to purchase a weather house that has a sunshine lady and a raincoat man, which automatically comes out whenever it is going to rain or the sun shines. A reader writes that the plastic weather stations are in stock at Madisonburg Clock Shop, Rt. 192, Box 34, Madisonburg, PA 16852.

ANSWER — Nancy Crissman, Bloomsburg, wanted more information on using Blue Stone and on Barley straw to prevent pond algae. Thanks to Joyce Stuff who writes that "Organic Gardening" recommends using 3-ounces barley straw for every square yard of water surface for severe algae. For ongoing maintenance, apply about half that amount in early spring and then every six months. Place the straw inside porous net bags. They recommend floating the straw on top of the water but Crissmans placed several stones in the bag so it sinks to the bottom. For a large pond, Crissman would just place a bale of straw in the middle of the pond. Barley straw in net bags can be purchased by calling this New York number (716) 396-2753.

Karen Mull, Elizabethtown, writes that she controls algae in a 30x30-foot lined pond by using 5 tablespoons septic tank bacteria per 100 gallons. A day or two after adding the first batch, she adds a double dose. After the second week, she adds another dose. The bacteria competes with the oxygen in the water and uses it up before algae has a chance to grow. she uses a net to skim off the algae if any grows. Later on she may give another dosage. Pond blocks that are made to stop algae will not harm the fish.

ANSWER — A reader writes to get rid of skunks place fly poison in a pan with some milk. Be sure to keep pets and children away.

ANSWER — Norma McClure, Freeland, Md., asked where to find heavy divided plates like they used to have in restaurants. Thanks to Karen Mull who writes that she found the plates at a large warehouse where every kind of utensil and equipment is sold. Call (717) 975-2434 or write to 930 N. Front St., Marysville, PA.

ANSWER — Thomas Yarnall, Gilbertsville, wrote that cabbage, cauliflower, and grass hay is showing purple color in his area. He heard that it is blamed on an environmental problem. Thanks to Jane Stankywicz who recommends he contact an investigative reporter or scientific journalist by writing to Linda Howe, P.O. Box 300, Jamison, PA 18929.

ANSWER — B. Light, Lebanon, wanted to know where to obtain dolls and colored milk filter pads to dress dolls with them. Thanks to Karen Mull, Elizabethtown, who recommends contacting a farm store that sells Surge milk filters. Dye them with fabric dye. A.C. Moore Craft stores probably has a large selection of dyes. A farm store in Elizabethtown sells milk filters called Brandt's. Call 1-800-872-7478.

ANSWER — Paul Cherniski, Unionville, wanted to know where to purchase laminated wood to use on rifle stocks. Thanks to Ella Hix for writing that laminated wood in all colors and sizes can be purchased from Bailey Lumber Co., Kempton, PA 19529. Call (610) 756-6827.

ANSWER — E.M. Snyder, Red Lion, wanted to know how to keep deer out of the truck patch. Thanks to Karen Mull, Elizabethtown, for sending this idea from "Organic Gardening," Tie a washline or few through the garden and fasten aluminum foil pie pans together to make noise when the wind blows. Hang up a few pieces of clothing with a human scent and scatter old shoes throughout the garden. Anything that blows around or makes noise might deter deer. Human urine is also said to deter deer.

L. Aaron, New Providence, recommends playing a radio in the garden. The reader writes this really works to keep both deer and coons from gardens and from sweet corn.

ANSWER — Andy Beelor, 218 Thompson Rd., Delta, PA 17314, wants to buy the books, "Chesapeak," which has some history on William Penn and Ben Franklin; "Anne of the Green Acre," and "Pollyanna Grows up." Henry King, Drumore, recommends contacting Brookside Boodstore, 420 Weaver Rd. Millersburg, PA 17061.

Somerset Maple Sugar Season Ends With Festival

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

MEYERSDALE (Somerset Co.) — The annual Pennsylvania Maple Festival – this year number 52 – is held because there is no sweeter way on earth to celebrate the natural resurrection of life in early spring.

Maple producers have harvested the first of all crops with the ingathering of hundreds of thousands of sap after its pearl-shaped droplets have rolled out over the dainty spillway called a spile. The spile is inserted into the side of a maple tree where a maple producer has drilled a tiny hole for the sugar water to escape. In other words, they have "tapped" the tree.

Collectively, the droplets ultimately fill multiplied tanks that hold the sweet water for boiling down or evaporating it into an all natural 100 percent pure maple syrup.

Like honey, maple syrup is one of nature's best sweeteners.

A maple queen always reigns over the festivities on the last two weekends in April. This year Jessica Brown a senior from Somerset Area High School won the prestigious honor in an educational scholarship pageant held earlier.

Being highly visible and promoting the maple industry to the public is her primary responsibility.

The maple king title, however, is determined by a contest wherein this season's maple products are judged by knowledgeable persons.

Matthew Emerick, 17, of Hyndman, the representative of Emerick's Sugar Camp, was chosen.

"I put our best products in the nine classes needed to win," Emerick said, "and won."

Emerick, who always has a birthday during the maple festival, was the maple king once before, two years ago.

He loves maple sugaring, at age 17, as much as he did when his parents, Ed and Wilma Emerick allowed him to help in little ways at age six or seven.

More often, than not, it's the younger man boiling down the sap, while his dad hauls sweet water into the camp from the woods.

They use a reverse osmosis machine to separate the water prior to the evaporation itself, so only that part containing the sugar continues through the entire process.

Emerick gets creative with maple syrup and came up with maple-covered pretzels for the 50th Maple Festival. This time however, like William Tell he chose to target an apple with a bit of genius and made a "Maple Candy Apple."

I cooked the syrup to 300 degrees and dipped the apple in it for a hard maple coating."

"It's interesting to see what I can come up with and create each year," said the Meyersdale high school junior.

Plans for his future are unsettled, Emerick reports, but adds without hesitation, that maple sugaring will always be a part of his life.

As Maple King, promotion is his goal, although, occasionally, he escorts the Maple Queen. Next spring, Emerick will perform the official tree-tapping ceremony for the Somerset County Maple Producer's Association.

The organization, according to its president Gary Blocher of Milroy Farms Maple Camp near Salisbury, has about 35 members. Blocher says there are at least that many additional backyard maple producers who enjoy making maple syrup for their families.

On-average the 1999 season was hit by sporadic weather patterns that across the county affected the overall maple production. February had unseasonably warm temperatures, the snowstorms in early March, when good runs of sugar water were expected, instead shut down some camps.

The Maple Festival includes an historical pageant titled "Legend of the Magic Water;" auto shows, grand feature parade, Lions pancake house, maple sugar demonstrations, historic Maple Manor, old Doctor's Office, Cobbler's Shop, Country Store and live entertainment.

There are competitions in running, walking and biking.

Edible Flowers Offer Gourmet Flavor Bouquet

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Food fans are continually on the lookout for new recipe for ingredients, and a horticulture expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences says studious gourmets can find many palatable items in their flower garden.

"First, you should eat only those flowers you can absolutely identify as edible," said Peter Ferretti, professor of vegetable crops. "Second, you should eat only flowers grown in a garden where no pesticides have been used. That means do not eat flowers from nurseries, florists or garden centers—most flowers from those places have received chemical treatments."

Ferretti cites "Edible Flowers from Garden to Plate," by Cathy Barash, as a must-have guide to flowers as food. The book lists 70 types of edible flowers and offers detailed photographs and descriptions.

Ferretti says most edible flowers are used as garnishes, decorations or in salads. In most cases, he recommends eating only flower petals, removing the pistils, stigmas, and stamens from the bloom before eating. "An exception to that is saffron, the world's most expensive spice, which is made from the pistils of the fall-blooming saffron crocus (C. sativas)," he said.

He also recommends that people who suffer from allergies, hay fever or asthma refrain from eating flowers. "Flower petals can contain a great deal of pollen and other allergens," Ferretti says.

Many edible flowers grow wild in fields and along roadsides. Ferretti warns that flowers should not be picked near a busy highway, road or street. "The lead from car exhausts and cadmium released by the friction of tires on a roadway will permeate all plant life near a roadway," he says. "I would pick edible flowers only from a road that is rarely traveled, and even then I would pick flowers well away from the road — about 6 to 10 feet."

Select The Right Electricity Supplier

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — When it comes to utility bills, it's just human nature to pay the charge and not think about it again until next month. In the new era of deregulated electricity suppliers, however, consumers should be very savvy shoppers, according to an expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Deregulation of electricity generation means that customers can choose the company responsible for generating the electricity they use," said Dennis Buffington, professor of agricultural and biological engineering. "Each customer's local utility still is responsible for transmitting and distributing power to homes."

Power generation companies currently are marketing services across Pennsylvania, asking consumers to enroll in a program to choose electricity suppliers. Once enrolled, consumers will receive a list of licensed suppliers interested in selling electricity in their area.

"Residential customers should know whether the prices listed by suppliers are just for generation, or whether transmission of power is included within that price," Buffington said.

All consumers — both commercial and residential — should get understandable answers to questions concerning:

• Price. Be sure the price you pay per kilowatt-hour is listed.

• Rates. Are there special peak and off-peak rates? Find out what the time periods are for the special rates.

• Fees. Customers should determine if the supplier includes a monthly service charge, a minimum monthly charge or a membership fee.

• Billing. Make sure you know the supplier's policy on what services you will be billed for. "Most people don't want to pay two utility bills," Buffington said. "Be aware of how your utilities will be billed, and whether you can pay your bill by electronically transferring funds."

• Budget Billing. Many consumers pay a pro-rated monthly fee that reflects electrical usage throughout an entire year, avoiding huge single-month bills. Some suppliers may not offer a budgeting service.

• Contracts. Find out the exact length of the contract. Ask the supplier to detail what charges or other penalties are billed to the consumer if you break the contract.

• Other Services. Electricity suppliers can offer additional services, such as heating oil, natural gas and equipment maintenance.

Buffington says consumers in some areas of Pennsylvania may not find many electricity suppliers competing for their residential business. "Some suppliers may be concentrating on capturing a large share of the industrial and commercial market before concentrating on residential users," Buffington explains. "Other suppliers may decide that profit margins in the residential market are too small for them to compete aggressively." More suppliers will concentrate on residential markets over the coming year. He recommends that consumers call available suppliers frequently to remain updated on service rates and special offers.

"New suppliers are always entering the market, and some suppliers find they can't compete and drop out of the market," Buffington said. "It pays to keep yourself updated on who the players are in the marketplace."

Consumers can see up-to-date lists of electricity suppliers for all areas of the state at the Website: http://www.electrichoice.com,, or by contacting the Penn State Cooperative Extension office in your county.

Get Rid Of Moss

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Moss is one of the most persistent and annoying weeds that occurs in home lawns, but you can control it, says a Penn State turfgrass scientist.

"Moss is an opportunistic plant that grows in bare soil where grass is weak and thin," said Peter Landschoot, associate professor of turfgrass science. "Once moss has invaded the lawn, grass won't spread into those areas."

Attempts to get rid of moss are rarely effective unless a dense, active growing turf can take its place, he said.

To control moss, you have to consider the reasons why it began to grow in your lawn. Moss usually thrives under conditions that aren't conducive to good turf growth, such as poor soil fertility, acid soil, heavy shade, excessive moisture or shallow, rocky soils.

The first step in controlling moss is to test the soil for nutrient content and pH. Soil test kits are available from the Penn State Cooperative Extension office for a nominal fee.

If the soil is deficient in nutrients or needs lime, the soil test report will indicate how much fertilizer and lime to apply and when to apply them. Over time, improved soil conditions will help soil conditions will help your grass compete with the moss."

If shade or moisture limit good turf growth, steps can be taken to correct the situation. For example, remove some trees or tree branches to increase sunlight and air circulation, or plant grasses or other ground covers that are adapted to shady or moist areas.

Attempt to eliminate moss with chemicals only after the limiting factors for good turf growth have been corrected. Unfortunately, there are only a few chemicals available for use on lawns.

"These products typically contain salts that will dehydrate or 'burn' the moss," said Landschoot. "But they also can burn desirable turfgrasses if used improperly, so be sure to follow the directions on the label." Remember, he said, it took a long time for the moss to become established, so it will take a long time to control it.

THE ECONOMICS OF HEIFER REARING

Roland P. Freund
Farm Management Agent
Penn State

To prepare a paper for a recent conference, I gathered information on what is required to rear a heifer from birth to freshening. Numerous calculations were made to determine how much income would be necessary from the sale of a heifer to cover all those costs.

The results suggested a low of $1,243 to a high of $1,584, depending on the age at freshening and the housing system chosen.

It should be further noted that the "break-even heifer price" is the price which a person who rears heifers should have in hand, after all selling/transport costs are deducted from sale income, to cover all costs as used in these calculations. That price should never be confused with the dairyman's "replacement cost." For the dairy operator, the cost to replace a cull cow is the cost of the replacement heifer minus the proceeds from the sale of that cull.

In the following discussion, the important factors which contribute to those cost differences will be addressed. For a mailed copy of the complete paper, including computation tables, write to me at 1100 Claremont Road, Carlisle, PA 17013, email rfreund@psu.edu. or call (717) 240-6500.

Age At Freshening

It is important that we raise heifers in 24 months or less if we are going to have any chance of making a profitable enterprise out of heifer rearing. It costs about $150 less to raise a heifer to freshen in 24 months than in 28 months. But it costs about $260 less to do it in 22 months than in 28 months.

Increasing rate of gain has a big impact on the economics of heifer rearing. However, extreme caution should be advised, since rearing them like beef can lead to mammary and other developmental problems.

Nutrition research is still catching up on the do's and don'ts of fast heifer rearing, but current research project observations suggest that a combination of balanced nutrition and exercise for the heifer will be necessary to produce fast growing, well-developed replacements with the ability to milk at their genetic potential.

Housing System

If it were possible to rear heifers to freshen in 22 months in chicken coops and tied to combines in the equipment shed, then this would be the most economical rearing system. But this is not likely to happen. However, because more capital spent on housing can reduce both bedding and labor costs, and it can make possible the quicker rearing of calves, we can justify good labor-efficient facilities.

It should be noted that the greatest labor savings can be realized with the preweaning and newly-weaned groups. Housing priority should first be placed on these young groups, then on facilities for the breeding-age group. Open and bred heifer groups are most economically reared in low-cost facilities but they should provide drive-by feeding and clean basic shelter.

When one has the unfortunate experience to encounter heifers up to their hocks in "soup," this is pretty dramatic evidence of gross neglect and mismanagement. Heifers with a high "Hock Soup Index" are unlikely to achieve the performance criteria included in this analysis. But managers should be warned that there is no immunity to "hock soup" to be bought with expensive facilities. Even the best of facilities has to be bedded, cleaned, and cared for if the animals housed in it are to achieve their genetic potential and the growth rates for which they are fed.

Feeding System

In these computations, feed costs for raising a heifer to freshening at 28 months were almost $600, at 24 months $526, and at 22 months, $500.

It should be noted that feed prices were held low because the poor outlook on grain prices, and the relatively low marketability for the types of feed used in the rations fed. These were based on per ton prices for alfalfa haylage (first cut) $35, mixed "heifer" hay $55, corn silage $20, shelled corn $89, ahd soybean meal at $200.

Higher prices would magnify both the per heifer costs above, and the differences in feed costs for the different aged heifers.

The calculations were based on feedlot rations designed to give the average daily gain to achieve a precalving weight of 1,350 pounds. No option to use pasture was explored in this analysis, but with good management it should be possible to maintain the best growth rates on pasture, providing that a corn silage-based TMR supplement were provided.

Conclusion

In the calculations used in this analysis, feed costs were less than 40 percent of total rearing costs. Heifer rearers need to examine their operations carefully to see what their total costs are. This analysis may provide a framework to be used in such evaluations.

Strategies to reduce these costs should aim first at growing healthy heifers to freshen in less than 24 months. Then provide facilities which reduce labor and maintain a healthy environment for the animals.

Buck Motorsports Celebrates 25th

BUCK (Lancaster Co.) — When Buck Motorsports Park opened 25 years ago, folks would turn out in the hundreds for an evening of family fun, taking in a handful of events (with mostly a local feel) throughout the summer.

Now, as Buck Motorsports Park prepares to celebrate its 25th anniversary season, a full calendar of events capturing local, regional, and national interest will draw crowds of more than 5,000 from Pennsylvania, Maryland, and more to the "Playground of Power" each week.

And while having monster truck shows, regional and national pulling events, mud bogs, demolition derbies, and championship rodeos on the schedule helps Buck Motorsports pack 'em in, the focus on providing family fun has never been greater.

"We take great pride in being able to showcase the level of performers and competitions we feature weekly," said Mike Hoff of Buck Motorsports Park. "But the reason we have been able to be successful and continue to grow for 25 years is our commitment to offer a fun night out for families and people of all ages at a reasonable price."

The 1999 season at The Buck opens Saturday, May 8 with a Mud Bog Series Event, featuring Modified, Super Stock, Pro Street and Street Legal classes, plus the kickoff to the Tuff Truck Challenge '99 series.

"We're very excited about our season opener," said Hoff. "It's going to be a lot of fun, we're expecting a big crowd, and it's a great way to begin what we think will be a memorable year for our fans."

Among the other high-profile events coming to Buck Motorsports Park in 1999 are Memorial Day Weekend Demolition Derby and Fireworks Display (May 29), Dave Martin's Championship Rodeo (June 5); The Smoke and Thunder Nationals (June 12); Big Rig National Championships (June 19); 25th Anniversary Independence Day Grand Demolition Derby and Fireworks Display (July 3); The NTPA Summer Nationals (July 10); Monster Mania Showdown featuring "Bigfoot," "Firestone Wilderness," "The Undertaker," and "Stone Cold Steve Austin" Monster Trucks (July 24); East Coast Points Series Summer Truck and Tractor Pulling Championships (Aug. 7); The Tuff Truck Nationals (Aug. 14); The 10th Annual Truckers Day at the Buck (Aug. 21); and The "Grave Digger" Monster Truck Show (Aug. 28).

The '99 season concludes Oct. 2 with the Mud Bog Series Finals.

For most events, gates at Buck Motorsports Park open at 5:30 p.m. with action getting under way at 7 p.m. Admission is from $10 (adults) to $5 (children 5-12), with children under 5 admitted free. Buck Motorsports Park is located 10 miles south of Lancaster on Rt. 272.

Pennsylvania Ranks Second In Christmas Tree Farms

MILLHEIM (Centre Co.) — The USDA has recently released information compiled as part of its 1997 Agricultural Census. This was the first census to separate Christmas tree production from other forestry products.

The census reported a total of 17,234 farms which harvested cut Christmas trees. Oregon had the most farms (1,626) followed by Pennsylvania (1,458) and North Carolina (1,257). The other top states in the number of Chrismas tree farms were Michigan, New Jersey, and New York.

The 1997 census also recorded Christmas tree sales dollars. Oregon again ranked number one ($111,999,000). North Carolina ($49,422,000) switched rank with Pennsylvania ($35,439,000) in this area.

Average farm size may be the major factor creating the difference in average farm income. The census also attempted to record farm acreage, however, due to Christmas trees being a multi-year crop, with uncut trees to be reported as other nursery and greenhouse crops, there was enough confusion in the reporting process to invalidate these numbers.

As expected, the average sales of Christmas tree farms across the United States is, on the average, relatively small with 89.1 percent of the farms reporting sales of $39,000 or less.

At the other end of the spectrum, there are very few large Christmas tree farms. Only 1.6 percent of the reporting Christmas tree farms had sales of $200,000 or more. This did, however, constitute 48.8 percent of total Christmas tree sales.

In June, Pennsylvania Christmas tree growers will vote on a marketing referendum that will enable growers in the Commonwealth to pool their resources and invest in research and marketing efforts on their behalf.

Growers who have not received information on the referendum and would like to be placed on the mailing list to receive a ballot, should call the PA Dept. of Agriculture at 717-787-5086. (In order to receive a ballot, growers must have 10 or more acres of trees.)

The Pennsylvania Christmas Tree Growers Association is a non-profit organization that provides educational and marketing opportunities for its members. The PCTGA was established in 1942. Its members were pioneers in the commercial Christmas tree industry and were instrumental in the formation of the National Christmas Tree Association. For more information on the PCTGA or the Christmas Tree Marketing Referendum, call the PCTGA office at 800-547-2842 or email at drs208@vicon.net.

Michigan Native Joins Forage Grass Seed Company

OGDENSBURG, N.J. — In the fall of 1998, Ben J. Bartlett began work for Barenbrug as a sales manager specializing in forage grasses.

He was a natural fit for Barenbrug's forage division because of his practical stocker cattle and sheep grazing background.

After leaving his parents' MIG family farm in Michigan's Upper Peninsula, Bartlett studied at Michigan State University and obtained a bachelor's degree in animal science.

From there, he pursued a master's degree in agricultural economics with a focus on small farm grazing alternatives from New Mexico State University.

Said Bartlett, "I have grown up learning about grazing my entire life and have even studied it in school. When I found out that Barenbrug was in search of a sales manager for a region covering the Michigan-Ohio area, I jumped at the chance. Barenbrug is a world leader in grass seed research as well as production. With the recent addition of a former Dutch dairy farmer and forage specialist John Thyssen to the staff, they have proved a commitment to the United States grazing industry. We are applying the best seed genetics, technical knowledge from a worldwide staff, and grazing know-how to service the MIG industry in the upper Midwest."

Barenbrug has become recognized nationwide for quality products such as BG-34 perennial ryegrass, Alice white clover, and Horsemaster horse pasture blends. Bartlett resides in Lansing, Mich. and has a territory covering all of Michigan, Ohio, and the bordering areas in Pennsylvania and Indiana. He is working on establishing a dealer network to service this area more efficiently.

Telehandlers: A New Machine Reaches For Ag Market

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — North America farmers are beginning to discover something many European farmers already know: telehandlers, once limited to construction sites, are equally effective on the farm.

Right now 60 percent of all telescopic handlers sold in Europe are used in agriculture. And here in North America, the number of telehandlers on the farm is growing.

Farmers are putting telehandlers to work on a wide range of jobs, including rehandling crops, moving bales, handling pallets and bulk bags of fertilizer, as well as trailer/vehicle loading and trailer towing. And on beef, hog and dairy operations, telehandlers are used for silage making, feeding livestock, shed cleaning, and manure handling.

According to the telehandler product specialists at New Holland, "Telehandlers offer advantages over traditional tractors with loaders and wheel loaders for all kinds of material handling applications on the farm. They have more lift capacity and are more durable than tractors with loaders because they are specifically designed for lifting."

Although these machines resemble a forklift, they do far more than just "lift and place" tasks. "Telehandlers combine the reach of a forklift, the strength and speed of a wheeled payloader, and the maneuverability of a skid-steer loader into one exceptionally versatile machine. They're becoming increasingly popular with cost-conscious farmers who want one durable, multi-purpose machine capable of performing a variety of jobs."

There are tremendous productivity advantages that can be gained by using telehandlers. Telehandlers outperform tractor loaders when loading trucks from one side and stacking bales. They can reach over a ditch better than a forklift. And when it comes to stockpiling or loading a high-sided truck, a telehandler will out-perform a wheel loader.

New Holland's LM430 telehandler features four-wheel steering capability for outstanding maneuverability and versatility. Steering modes include two-wheel steer for secure handling when roading the machine; four-wheel circle steer, ideal for maneuvering and turning in tight areas; and four-wheel crab steering, where all four wheels turn in the same direction, improving maneuverability when working along walls.

The LM430 has the same control configuration as a wheel loader. The boom lift/lower and bucket crowd/dump are controlled by the single lever joystick. This pattern is ideal for continuous bucket work, and makes it easy for the operator to be productive with a bucket or other bucket-type attachments.

With a lift height of 22-foot 2-inch and a lift capacity of 6,000 pounds, the LM430 is well-suited for the demands of loader and bucket work. A 148-degree rotation on the boom linkage provides good bucket dump angles, allowing the bucket to dump cleanly.

On the end of the boom, the LM430 features a quick-attach coupling system that allows easy attachment pickup. To further simplify operation, the LM430 is equipped with hydraulic pinlocking so the attachment can be engaged or disengaged without leaving the cab. This is a feature normally found on large articulated wheel loaders.

The LM430 is equipped with a standard 106-hp (gross) New Holland Iveco engine. This engine provides the power needed for effective pushing with a bucket, especially when used in poor ground conditions or when making silage, when the machine is operating on a soft surface and often has to climb up an incline.

Ecogen Expands Collaboration With FMC

PHILADELPHIA — Ecogen Inc., a developer of microbial biopesticides, announced that it has signed a letter of intent designating FMC Corporation as Ecogen's exclusive distributor for its Lepinox™ 15 percent WDG and 2 percent Bt bioinsecticide products in North America.

It is anticipated that during 1999 Ecogen will also distribute Lepinox on the West Coast of the U.S. as well as in Texas and Florida.

In 1999 FMC will concentrate its efforts east of the Rocky Mountains in the vegetable, fruit, and row crop markets. This collaboration expands FMC's distribution reach for Lepinox to South, Central and North America.

The U.S. pesticide market for control of caterpillars, excluding the West Coast, is estimated to be about $250 million.

FMC began distributing Lepinox in Mexico for Ecogen last year under an agreement that continues through the end of the year 2003, and the expansion into the U.S. is based on the positive reception Lepinox has received in that market. FMC's distribution will cover all U.S. markets except greenhouse production.

Lepinox is registered in the United States by Ecogen to combat a broad spectrum of caterpillar pests in row crops and fruit and vegetables, including budworm, bollworm, loopers, armyworms, leafrollers and diamondback moth. Target crops include cotton, soybeans, leafy and fruiting vegetables, sweet corn, tree fruit, and berries.

Lepinox is a product developed utilizing recombinant DNA and protein engineering technology to create novel insecticidal proteins that have increased activity against several species of caterpillars, while maintaining the favorable environmental and safety aspects of a naturally occurring Bt Lepinox is designed to work as a stand-alone product or as part of an integrated pest management program.

Case Features Crop Care Equipment

RACINE, Wis. — Case Corporation will begin marketing former Tyler products under the Case IH brand name and red color.

The new identification will be used in conjunction with existing product names, including Patriot, Titan, Flex-Air and AIM. The Tyler name and colors will continue to be used on tenders and spreaders.

Case acquired Tyler industries in May 1998 and later established Case Tyler as the business unit devoted exclusively to the production of agricultural sprayers and applicators for commercial and farm use.

"Sprayers and applicators represent key additions to the line of Case IH products," said John Garrison, general manager, agricultural systems for Case. "These products play an important role in our overall strategy to provide a complete line of agricultural products and services for the entire crop production cycle."

The established distribution network will continue to service customers' needs for new products, parts and service. In addition, participating Case IH dealerships throughout North America will offer Case IH crop care products.

Irv Aal, general manager of Case Tyler, said the company's commitment to serving customers will continue, while adding the benefits of Case's resources. "The Tyler name has always stood for putting customers first — by paying attention to their needs, building the right products and providing service after the sale," said Aal.

"With Case IH crop care equipment, our customers will realize the added value that comes from expanded research and development, technology and financial resources. We expect to serve them even better now."

1999 National Angus Conference Focuses On The Next Millennium

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — Amarillo, Texas will be the site for the 1999 National Angus Conference and Tour, Sept. 10-11, sponsored by the American Angus Association and Texas Angus Association.

"Angus In The New Millennium" will be the theme for the conference program, which bills some of the most respected speakers in the beef industry. Dr. Tom Field, Colorado State University, Fort Collins, will deliver the keynote address to attendees. He is director of the Beef Industry Leadership Master of Agriculture Program at Colorado State and has presented speeches at more than 150 international, national, state, and local beef cattle or teaching meetings.

"This program is a can't miss for the purebred and commercial producers who want to reevaluate where their herd is as they move into the year 2000," said Richard L. Spader, American Angus Association executive vice president. "The slate of speakers will offer insight to all parts of the beef industry, as well as how breeders can produce a higher quality, more consistent product for the consumer marketplace."

In addition to Field, speakers on Friday's program will focus on the purebred approach to quality beef, Angus performance programs, building value into the commercial industry, increasing profit in the feedlot and Association programs for commercial producers. Topics discussed on Saturday will include the quest for quality beef, the packer perspective for quality beef, where beef numbers will take us in the new millennium, defining quality in a competitive beef market, and the Angus edge in consumer satisfaction.

The two-day tour, which will depart from and return to Amarillo both days, will showcase the diversity of the Texas Panhandle's beef industry. Similar to the conference program, the tour will give participants a look at many segments of the beef industry, as well as the opportunity to learn about the ranching heritage of west Texas.

The first day will begin with a visit to the historic JA Ranch, Claude, Texas, and then on to Bradley 3 Ranch, Childress, Texas, where the group will be hosted for lunch. That afternoon the tour moves to Abraham Ranch, Canadian, Texas, on the scenic Red Deer Creek. This stop will feature a cutting horse demonstration, a western style beef dinner and evening entertainment. Afterwards, the group will return to Amarillo for the night.

The performance oriented herd at Hales Angus, Canyon, Texas, will be the first stop on day two, followed by Lust-Dodd Angus, Lazbuddie, Texas, who will host lunch while the group tours a purebred Angus herd and heifer development facility. From there, the tour travels to a family operation at Olson Cattle Company, Hereford, Texas. Randall County Feeders, a large commercial feedyard near Canyon, Texas, will round out the afternoon schedule.

To complete the two-day event, the tour will visit the Palo Duro Canyon, and dinner will be served at the Panhandle Plains Historical Museum where the group will enjoy the state's largest historical museum before returning to Amarillo.

Participants are responsible for making their own hotel reservations and can do so by calling the Radisson Inn Amarillo Airport at (806) 373-3303. Please mention you are with the National Angus Conference. A rate of $62 plus tax has been secured, and reservation deadline is August 26, 1999.

Registration materials for both the National Angus Conference and Tour are available from the American Angus Association at 3201 Frederick Ave., St. Joseph, Mo. 64506. Request registration materials by calling (816) 383-5100 or via e-mail at lcampbell@angus.org.

C. Walter England Lecture Established At Maryland

COLLEGE PARK, Md. – C. Walter England of nearby Silver Spring, Md., appears to have no challenger as the oldest living alumnus of the University of Maryland's College of Agriculture and Natural Resources.

As Dr. England neared his 99th birthday in late 1998, the college's Department of Animal and Avian Sciences honored him by establishing the C. Walter England Dairy Technology Lectureship.

The inaugural lecture was presented during an HTST Pasteurizer Short Course on the College Park campus for dairy processing plant personnel. There were 58 participants from five states. John E. Rushing, 51, professor of food science and internationally known extension dairy processing specialist at North Carolina State University since 1982, was the guest lecturer.

Rushing is a past chairman of both the Dairy Foods Division and the Extension Division of the Institute of Food Technologists, an international professional organization. Rushing has conducted a number of mini-courses in connection with trade association annual meetings, and he has a reputation as a problem-solver among members of the Carolina-Virginia Dairy Products Association. He has received numerous awards for his professional and educational activities.

England, the man being honored, also had a distinguished professional career during his active years. He supervised the dairy technology program at the University of Maryland for 11 years, 1933-1944, and was technical director for C.Y. Stevens Industries in Washington, D.C., for 10 years, 1944-1954. From 1954 to 1969 he operated his own commercial dairy and foods laboratories at both Beltsville and Frederick, Md.

England helped to gain passage of the first dairy inspection law in Maryland. His guidance in the design and efficient operation of processing plants and his creation of accepted dairy products standards have been recognized throughout the nation.

A native of Calvert, Md. (Cecil County), England received a bachelor's degree from Maryland in dairy processing in 1923 and earned doctorate and masters degrees in the same field at Cornell University in 1931 and 1933, respectively.

He has been honored by the University of Maryland's ag alumni chapter and the Dairy Technology Society of Maryland and the District of Columbia. His portrait hangs in the Maryland Dairy Shrine's Hall of Fame at the Clarksville facility of the Central Maryland Research and Education Center.

Monsanto, Zeneca Announce Agreement

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Monsanto Company and Zeneca Agrochemicals announced a long-term license agreement on undisclosed terms under which Zeneca will test, develop, and register "Touchdown" herbicide products for use on or over the top of Roundup Ready soybeans, corn, and cotton in the United States.

Under the agreement, Zeneca, once it has obtained U.S. Environmental Protection Agency registration, will sell Touchdown herbicide for application on or over the top of these crops.

Additionally, Monsanto and Zeneca have agreed to negotiate in good faith access to additional Roundup Ready crops in the United States and to all Roundup Ready crops globally, as they are commercialized. Negotiations for commercial access after the second commercial season will occur on a country and crop basis. Under this agreement, Zeneca would test, develop, and register it's products while negotiations are taking place.

As part of the agreement, Zeneca, Monsanto and Pioneer Hi-Bred International Inc. have agreed to dismiss the lawsuits they have pending against each other in Delaware and Missouri. These relate to the use of Touchdown over Roundup Ready crops and related Monsanto patents, and to Monsanto's marketing practices.

Monsanto's Roundup and Zeneca's Touchdown herbicides will compete with each other in the agricultural weed control market.

OURS DOESN'T EITHER

When you work the land, you don't have the luxury of working 9 to 5. You need to be available all day, every day...and if your equipment breaks down, you need it fixed now, not tommorrow at 3:00.

Deer Creek understands the way you work. That's why we're here when you need us with parts and service 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Where you buy a product is often as important as what you buy!

WHAT ARE YOU PAYING FOR WHEN YOU BUY ELECTRICITY?

Dennis E. Buffington
Professor
Agricultural and Biological Engineering Department

When you pay your monthly electricity bill, just what are you paying for?

The answer is easy — you're paying for the electricity to provide light in your poultry houses and to provide all the power you need for the equipment in your houses.

Let's examine just what you are paying for.

• Generation charge. You're paying for the generation of the electricity, whether the electricity is generated from energy in coal, oil, natural gas, nuclear fusion, flowing water, biogas digesters, or wind.

• Transmission charge. The transmission of electricity is the transport of high voltage electricity from the generation site to the substation.

• Distribution charge. The distribution of the electricity begins at the substation where the high voltage electricity is transformed into much lower levels of voltage. Then the electicity is transferred via wires on wooden poles or in underground cables to companies, farms, and communities. The distribution charge includes charges for local service to maintain the distribution infrastructure and to restore service after storms and accidents. Also included are expenses for meter reading, billing, and other customer services.

• Demand charge. The demand charge is undoubtedly the least understand charge included on the utility bill. First, let me point out that residential customers do not receive itemized demand charges — only commercial and industrial customers need to pay itemized demand charges. The rest of this article will focus on explaining the demand charge and how you can reduce this charge through an effective demand management program.

The demand charge is based on your peak demand for electricity in a 15-minute or 30-minute interval within the 720 hours (or so) of the month. Let's say that your peak demand during the 30-minute interval of each day of the month is 175 kW (kilowatts). But for just 30 minutes for one day, the demand shoots up to 275 kW.

These are not realistic numbers! The demand charge for this scenario will be based on the demand of 275 kW, even though the average demand is much lower. Since demand charges can be as high as $8 per kW per month, you could pay an extra $800 that month for the spike in electrical demand for one day. What's worse, with some utility companies, you will actually pay a penalty in succeeding months for that one day when things got out of control.

But why are you charged so much for a demand charge? The demand charge is levied to assess you for the capacity that the local utility company needs to maintain to serve your needs. For this particular example, the utility company needed a capacity of 275kW to serve your electrical needs for one month, even though you needed that full capacity for just 30 minutes of the month.

Some people refer to the demand charge ($/kW) as a "capacity charge" and the electricity charge (cents/kWh) as an "energy charge." By implementing an energy conservation program, you can lower your energy charges. By implementing a demand management program, you can lower your demand charges.

To reduce demand charges, you need to manage your electrical loads so that you avoid the high peaks in your electrical usage. The key is to avoid stacking the large electrical loads on top of each other, thus creating the spikes in electricity usage. The large electricity users on poultry farms are lights, ventilation fans, feed grinders and mixers, pelletizers, feed and egg conveyors, and egg refrigeators. Care must be exercised to ensure that these electricity hogs are not running simultaneously unless necessary for sound management of your poultry operations. Although you are interested in reducing your demand charges and your total electricity bill, you must place higher emphasis on increasing your profitability and net cash flow. Therefore, you must focus on using the optimum amount of electricity (and other forms of energy) to increase profitability.

Managing electrical demand is a 24-hours-per-day, seven-days-per-week activity. Therefore, it become prudent to consider developing a demand management program that can be easily understood and implemented by others involved in your poultry operation, or you may consider investing in a computerized demand management control system. Again, the emphasis is on increasing the profitability of your poultry enterprises.

With the advent of the deregulation of electricity generation in Pennsylvania, poultry producers have the opportunity to select the company that is responsible for the generation and the transmission of the electricity that they consume. When shopping for electricity suppliers, you obviously need to inquire about their charges for generation and transmission and charges for demand.

In this new deregulated environment, many suppliers are not charging for demand per se. Instead they may place a higher price on the electricity that you use for certain hours of the day when electricity is in greatest demand, generally from 8 a.m. to 6 p.. In that case, you will need to figure out how to shift some of your electrical loads to the cheaper periods of each day.

Keep in mind that you will always be connected to your local utility company for distribution of electricity and customer services. You need to inquire what the demand charge is with your local company and what the demand charge will be if you select a different supplier of electricity.

Poultry producers have many challenges to survive in the increasingly competitive poultry industry. A producer can increase the profitability of the poultry operation by learning how to purchase and use electricity in an optimal manner.

ATTENTION EXCAVATORS

NEW CONCEPT REVEALED

ONE POWER SOURCE DOES IT ALL

Excavators are discovering a better way to move dirt! You see, the Case IH Steiger Quadrac isn't just for agriculture anymore. More and more Steiger Quadtracs are pulling Reynolds scrapers and pans . . . moving dirt for considerably less. Best of all, the Steiger Quadtrac is exceptional when it comes to working in wet conditions. See for yourself how using a Steiger Quadtrac can generate additional profits for you!

A TRUE STORY

Wilkinson Farms had been using Steiger tractors in agriculture for several years. Thinking that the Steiger would also be effective in construction applications, Wilkinson Farms formed Technivate, a construction company using Reynolds pans and scrapers with a couple of Steiger tractors The results have been phenominal. At last count, Technovate operates a fleet of 13 Case IH Steiger tractors moving dirt with Reynolds pans.

Sell your beans?
"It just doesn't make sense"

1. Why loose the 18% high energy oil in your own beans?
2. Why let the soybean processor take the valuable lechicin?
3. Why forfeit 50% of the metabolizable energy over SBM?
4. Why pay storage, trucking and shrink?

Be sensible!
Let SCHNUPP'S custom roast your Soybeans

Receive the value of added fat in your ration - MORE MILK
Get the most By-Pass Protein available in your beans - MORE PROTEIN UPTAKE
Keep all the nutritional components originally in the soybean. - MORE FLEXIBILITY
Soybeans are valuable, keep profits at home! - MORE FARM INCOME

FOUR SIMPLE STEPS TO SUCCESS

Farm For Profit Step 1
SOIL MANAGEMENT

ACHIEVE
- Contains nutrients and feeders which aid in sustaining microorganisms in the soil

REMEDY
- Contains nutrients and micronutrients which aid in sustaining microorganisms in the soil.

TANK MIXING
STEP 2 PLANT NUTRITION
& STEP 1

We have found be adding 12 8 oz of Remedy and a small amount of Achieve per acre to the recommended amount of Farm For Profit Step 2 True Solution Starter Fertilizer and applying directly on the seed or in the seed cradle we got outstanding results

Farm For Profit Step 2
PLANT NUTRITION
FARM FOR PROFIT TRUE SOLUTION STARTER FERTILIZER
- Near neutral pH
- 100% available.
- Root zone placement
- Low salt index
- Foliar Feeding.

Farm For Profit has established their own standard for quality Unlike many liquid fertilizers Farm For Profit True Solution Starter Fertilizer is a solution. It is not just particles suspended in liquid Each drop contains the exact N-P-K ratio of the standard formulation Farm For Profit liquid fertilizer is consistent and stable and won't settle out. It handles easily. It can be stored indefinitely When it is applied, it flows evenly and cleanly Farm For Profit True Solution Starter Fertilizer meets our standard for quality

Farm For Profit Step 3
VEGETABLE OIL
1. Encapsulates the chemical.
2. Helps generate uniform droplet size.
3. Greatly reduces chemical evaporation
4. Reduces chemical drift.
5. Increases the coverage because of its spreading and sticking ability.
6. Reduces chemical wash off
7. Gives you better control of the chemicals.

One of Farm For Profit's main concerns is the level of soil and water pollution found today. Our goal is to remove as much petroleum base material and farm chemical from the soil as possible Farm For Profit Step 3 Vegetable Oil gives us a means to reduce the level of both petroleum base materials and farm chemicals.

Farm For Profit Step 4
TRAINED FIELD PERSONNEL

The Farm For Profit Authorized Distributor or Dealer in Your Area Will:
- Explain the total Farm For Profit program to you.
- Explain the best fertilizer program for your operation
- Suggest ways to improve the efficiency of your chemical program.
- Explain to you what other farmers have been doing to cut their operating expenses while maintaining or increasing their production output.

Farmers Helping Farmers
